France Ready To Give Soviet Cash to Build War Defenses

Provisions of Treaty for Mutual Military Aid Revealed.

Pact Leaves Door Open for Germany

The Situation Abroad.

In Paris the text of the Franco-Russian mutual aid pact was made public. France agreed to help the Soviet build roadways and railways in the west.

In London, it was reported, Britain must spend $116,000,000 to match Germany in the air.

Poland exchanged three German spies, one a woman, for Baron George Sosnowski, held by the Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 3.—France and Russia today made public the provisions of their new mutual assistance treaty guaranteeing each the aid of the other's army in the event of "unprovoked aggression on the part of any European state."

At the same time official quarters disclosed that France stood ready to help the Soviet build railways and strategic roads along her western frontier so as to facilitate movement of the Red army in that area.

A conference between the general army staffs of the two nations will be held shortly, it was stated, in order to determine just how quickly Russia could throw an army into the western front in case of war.

League Covenant Provision.

The treaty, signed yesterday and submitted to other governments before its publication today, pledges each nation the other's aid—on the basis of Article XV of the League of Nations covenant—for the next five years. It renews automatically unless one of the powers denounces it, giving one year's notice.

(Article XV of the League covenant provides that the league members shall submit any dispute likely to cause war to the council, whose members must agree unanimously on recommendation for settlement. Failing unanimity, "the members of the league reserve to themselves the right to take such action as they shall consider necessary for the maintenance of right and justice. • • •")

Under the treaty France and Russia promise to help each other if the council "for whatever reason" fails to act, the two signatories also agreeing to act jointly to hasten decision by the council.

A door was left open for Germany in the event she should decide to enter some eastern European security system, the protocol of signature restating France's and Russia's continued interest in an Eastern pact and stipulating that the pact provisions should "come into play only within the limits contemplated in the tri-partite agreement (among Russia, France and Germany) previously projected."

Rail Loan Expected.

To bring Russia's railways up to date would cost about 3,500,000,000 francs (approximately $367,500,000), it was said on good authority, and France was expected to provide the greater part of this.

In addition, French engineers would draw plans for the new roads and railways, and France would sell the Soviet much of the material, such as machinery and other manufactured products, to be used.

Financing of the work would be

5 Dead, 7 Injured Is Match Play Toll

Apartment House Is Razed in Poughkeepsie Fire.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 3.—A group of young children playing with matches was believed to have started a fire that late today swept through an apartment house here causing five deaths and injuries to seven other persons.

Starting under a staircase, the flames roared up through three floors and leaped across to two adjoining buildings before being brought under control. Damage was tentatively estimated at $25,000 by fire officials.

The dead:
Herbert Edward Seifts, 34.
Mrs. Mary Seifts, 30.
Joan Seifts, 3.
Rose Marie Seifts, 1½.
Shirley Elmore, 7.

"Kids playing with matches started the fire" said Police Detective George Brophy. "Neighborhood children told me they heard some other youngsters say, 'I'm going to get some matches and start a fire and the blaze was discovered later."

Police officials refused to say who the children were or who was being questioned in connection with the fire.

Omaha's Just Rearing to Run Today

Louisville Gay On Derby Eve; Today Favored

'Horsey' Town Sees 'Kunnells' in Stride as 'Experts' Talk of Classic.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Churchill Downs Race Track, May 3.—Kentucky "kunnels" are busy here tonight, sewing buttons on their long-tailed coats, pressing their white vests and twirling their mustaches, for tomorrow the sixty-first Kentucky Derby will be run. Call it Derby or call it Darby, slash the purse, criticize the field, bring on the mud, make it rain, change the price of silver, let Huey Long rave, plow under the corn—what cares Louisville? This is the horse race of horse races, the carnival of carnivals and the show of shows.

Louisville is horsey—so horsey that a 100-mile wind last night failed to budge the Derby spirit and a cloudburst following served only to whet more sharply the appetites here in Ole Kentucky. Yes, Louisville is horsey—so horsey one expects oats to flow from the water fountains and the street cars to gallop. The atmosphere is charged with derby. You catch the spirit the moment you set a foot on the station platform. It's that feeling that makes the ancient and ailing kunnels live another year.

The Derby slaps your face and reddens your cheeks. There's an extra spring to your step. There's much whistling. The cab driver, the street car conductor, the counter man, the butcher, the baker and the undertaker pause in their work at the least mention of the Derby.

A four-word question—Who do you like?—was wrecking the industry of this bustling city tonight. Ask and ye shall receive a horse—one horse per question, for there is no touting on a Kentucky Derby. Everyone is eager to have his or her choice sown to the four winds, where it will reap a barrage of "I told you so's" if the right horse wins.

Take Washington the night before Inauguration, New York the night before the Army-Navy game, Detroit the night before the World Series and Waterloo the night before Napoleon surrendered, roll them all into one and you have some idea of Louisvile on Derby eve. Celebrities sell for a dime a carton. It's beast, not man, that counts tonight and tomorrow here in the Blue Grass. Yes, suh.

After the early afternoon papers had had their last guesses as to the Derby field, the official entries

Derby Course Slowed as 100 Homes Are Unroofed in Louisville.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., May 3.—Wind and electrical storms moving northeastward from Texas last night and early today took an indicated death toll of 16 persons in five States.

Six States felt the fury of the freakish spring storms, which severed communication and power lines and caused heavy property damage.

Arkansas counted its known dead at six, while a West Memphis physician, Dr. James Fall, said he had reliable reports that five others, all Negroes, were killed in scattered farming communities of Southern Mississippi County.

Three were dead in Kentucky and Southern Indiana and one each in Tennessee and Texas.

Efforts to obtain an accurate check of the dead and injured in Northeast Arkansas were retarded by lack of communications. Ambulance drivers from Memphis, Tenn., across the river from the stricken territory, estimated the injured at 50. They worked all night in the vicinity of Joiner and Frenchmens Bayou.

All but one of the Arkansas dead were Negroes. Mrs. Mary H. Fields, 58, was fatally injured at Dermott, when her home collapsed during the storm.

Louisville, Ky., decked out for Derby day, was visited by one of the squalls which unroofed 100 houses and 50 business buildings. The Derby course, Churchill Downs, was damaged slightly, and the lightning and thunder excited the high-strung animals awaiting the race.

A bolt of lightning killed a Negro in Texas.

Heavy property damage was reported also in Tennessee and Louisiana, where power lines were put out of commission.

Almshouse Collapse Kills 3 and Injures 4

Pottsville, Pa., May 3 (AP).—Three men were killed and four were injured today in the collapse of a building at the Schuylkill County Almshouse in nearby Schuylkill Haven.

The dead: Joseph Rinkus, 61; Luther Weary, 63, and John Yurnavage, 58. All were crushed beneath debris.

Notables' Voices, Urging Peace, Heard Around the World by Air

Voices bearing messages of international good will spanned oceans, to fall upon the ears of 2,500 disarmament advocates assembled in McPherson Square, when the first round-the-world peace broadcast in history was held yesterday.

Ambassadors and other notables, both foreign and domestic, were present in large numbers, but the central figure of the observance was prevented from attending by the inclement weather. She was Miss Jane Addams and, while not part of the gathering, she participated in the program, broadcasting her greetings from a downtown studio.

Commemorating the twentieth birthday anniversary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the seventy-fifth year of Miss Addams, one of its founders, the outdoor ceremony was a high light of the league's annual meeting, which ends tomorrow.

Through the medium of international radio, Viscount Cecil and Arthur Henderson spoke from London, Mme. Krupskaya and Mme. Litvinoff from Moscow, Prince Tokugawa from Tokyo and Senator Paul Boncour from Paris. Norman Davis, America's "ambassador-at-large," was heard from New York.

Short introductory speeches were given on the platform by Ambassadors Lindsay, Troyanovsky and Saito; Jules Henry, French charge d'affaires representing Ambassador de Laboulaye; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes; Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Hannah Clothier Hull, national president of the W. I. L., and Miss Vida Milholland.

Bonus Gains As Senators Call a Recess

Passage of Vinson Bill by 2-to-1 Vote Indicated in Upset.

Administration Forces to Mass Strength Over Week-end.

By Robert C. Albright.

Unleashed veterans' sentiment in the Senate yesterday swept a $2,263,000,000 Treasury appropriation into the Legion-sponsored Vinson bonus bill and placed Administration leaders on the defensive in an apparently losing fight to prevent full cash payment of the bonus.

A recess of the Senate was hurriedly forced by the leaders after it became apparent a vote last night would have carried the revised Vinson full payment plan to victory by a 2-to-1 margin. An effort to rally Administration strength will be made over the week-end.

Chances for passage of either the Harrison bonus compromise, for partial immediate payment in cash or bonds, or the inflationary Patman plan, for full payment in greenbacks, were seriously impaired by the day's developments.

Veto Held Certain.

Conceding his own plan was "likely to be defeated," Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, vigorously expressed the conviction that the President not only will veto the amended Vinson measure, but the Senate will sustain his veto.

"And if this happens, the bonus won't come up again," he declared.

The sudden change in outlook came after Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, moved to include the $2,263,000,000 appropriation in the Vinson bill, which previously merely "authorized" an appropriation. The Senate swiftly accepted the amendment by a 56-to-23 vote.

Later another amendment was accepted, making an additional $1,457,000,000 now in the Veterans' Administration's bonus fund, also available for payment.

If the remodeled Vinson bill is approved after the Senate reconvenes Monday, the Harrison compromise, for which it was offered as a substitute, would be automatically killed by the action.

The Senate then would be left to choose between the Vinson bill and the Patman plan, with the chief remaining difference between them being—inflation. It was estimated the Vinson bill would pay the veterans some $92,000,000 more than the Patman measure, in sound Treasury dollars. The Patman plan would pay off in inflated dollars.

Opponents on Job.

A shrewd move to make the bonus bill, if it gets out of hand, so unpalatable to the White House as to insure a presidential veto was being considered by some Administration Senators, it was learned. It was said these might shift in the end to the Patman measure, to which the President repeatedly has voiced his objections. They might do this, they said, not because they like the Patman measure, but because the President will not take it.

Supporters of the Patman plan scoffed at talk of a veto.

"If the President for good and sufficient reason vetoes this bonus bill, I have good and sufficient reason to vote to override him, and so help me God I will do it!" shouted Senator Ellison D. Smith, mustachioed South Carolina Democrat.

"No Senator who is worth the hide that covers him will cringe before the threat of a veto."

While the bonus debate thundered, O. M. W. Sprague, former Treasury adviser, told a banking sub-committee that bonus payment in new currency, as under the Patman plan, would incite serious in-

2 'Reds' Defy Mob, Return After Beating

By the United Press.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., May 3.—Freed on the desert after a night of beatings, David Levinson and Robert Minor, international labor defense attorneys, arrived in Tohatchi today and told of being abducted by masked men in strife-torn Gallup last night.

Both men were cut and bruised about the face and head. They reported their safety to Gov. Clyde Tingley here and successfully pleaded for police protection to enable them to return to Gallup.

Levinson and Minor were sent to Gallup to undertake the defense of ten men charged with mob murder. Gallup was the scene of rioting in which Sheriff M. R. Carmichael and two unemployed men were killed last April 4.

"It was a terrible experience," Levinson said. "We were sitting in our parked car in Gallup discussing various angles of the case with Mrs. Julia Bartol, wife of one of the murder case defendants.

"Suddenly three cars drove up beside ours and stopped. Several masked men, with pistols, got out and walked over to us. They forced us to get out of the car and into one of their machines. Mrs. Bartol screamed, but apparently no one heard her.

"The minute we got in the car we were slugged on the heads with blackjacks and knocked onto the floor in the rear seat. Then the men beat us as they drove.

"I was only half conscious, but it seemed to me that we drove for more than an hour and I estimate

Business Leaders Ignore Human Side in Censure, President Says.

Gives Sharp Reply At Press Session

Many Leaders in Trade Favor Reform Bills, Executive Feels.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a stinging reply to the United States Chamber of Commerce, President Roosevelt yesterday declared that too many so-called business organizations misrepresent the views of those for whom they are supposed to speak.

Daily, for almost a week, the chamber has provided the forum for speeches, full of bitter denunciation of the New Deal, that have resounded over the Nation. Summing up, the chamber on Thursday adopted a set of resolutions declaring war—on the Administration.

Almost immediately the President was supported in one far Western city, when word came yesterday, through the Associated Press, that the Monterey, Calif., Chamber of Commerce, protesting the attacks on the Administration by the national chamber, had resigned from the latter body.

The President, biding his time, waited until yesterday's regular conference with the press. Then he observed, smilingly as usual, that in none of the speeches before the chamber had more than passing reference been made to what he called the human side of the argument—the unemployed, the aged destitute.

Charges Misrepresentation.

In vigorous language, he called on his own experience in the New York Legislature for instances, which he considered similar, of business organizations misrepresenting their constituents. He toyed with his cigarette holder as he sought for words to make clear his attitude.

Mr. Roosevelt's comment was touched off by a question about his conference Thursday afternoon, after the chamber had adopted its resolutions, with the Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce. This group, as though in direct answer to the action of the Chamber of Commerce, expressed approval of extension of the NRA and the New Deal social security program.

Seeking to avoid the mention of names, the President remarked that he had made an impromptu speech—and a good one, too—to the score of business men on the council. This speech, he said, he would reconstruct for the benefit of more than 100 newspapermen crowded about his desk.

It is difficult, he told the council members, to obtain an accurate expression of business thought. For example:

The first year he served in the Albany legislature the disastrous Triangle fire occurred. From 150 to 200 factory girls lost their lives, all because the doors to the fire escapes were locked. An inquiry was begun by a legislative committee, headed by the present Senator Robert F. Wagner, with Miss Frances Perkins, now Secretary of Labor, serving as committee secretary.

Opposed 54-Hour Week.

As a result of this investigation a factory inspection law was proposed. Almost all of New York was for it, including a majority of manufacturers, the President went on, yet chambers of commerce, merchants' associations and others vigorously opposed it.

Another instance of misrepresentation, he continued, was in the case of the New York law limiting the hours of women's work to 54 hours a week. The business associations were united against this

Permits Steel Merger

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.
JUDGE FRED M. RAYMOND.

Steel Combine Wins Decision In Trust Case

Federal Judge in Ohio Refuses Writ Against Republic's Merger.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 3.—A Department of Justice anti-trust action to enjoin the pending $336,000,000 merger of the Republic Steel Corporation with the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. met defeat in Federal Court today, a defeat which virtually assured completion of the deal—biggest of its kind in several years.

Whether the Government will appeal will be decided by Attorney General Homer Cummings. He will have 60 days to decide.

Today's set-back for the Department of Justice was embodied in a decision by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who refused to grant an injunction, because the Government "failed to prove its case."

The Government contended that the merger would violate the Clayton anti-trust act by substantially reducing competition in the steel industry.

Republic, the Government asserted, would acquire all of the assets of Corrigan-McKinney, including approximately 80 per cent of the Newton Steel Co., and virtually 100 per cent of the stock of the N. & G. Taylor Co. The combined company then would control, the department's counsel said, more than 16 per cent of the semifinished steel produced for sale in the United States, and 12 per cent of the merchant bars.

Attorneys for Republic and Corrigan-McKinney argued, however, that this would increase rather than diminish competition, by making the combined company stronger and better equipped to vie with other and larger companies.

Republic, with assets of about $271,000,000, is now the third largest American steel concern, and even with the merger additions it would still be exceeded in size by the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Corrigan-McKinney has assets estimated at $65,000,000.

Republic's principal plants are at Youngstown, Ohio, but it also has plants in Cleveland, Warren, Niles, Canton, Massillon and Elyria, Ohio;

Act Could Be Construed as Too Vague a Delegation of Authority.

Time of Decision Seen Vital Factor

Green Protests to White House Extension of Law Only 10 Months.

By Elliott Thurston.

The possibility that the entire NRA will be held invalid as too broad and vague a delegation of the legislative powers of Congress loomed last night as the United States Supreme Court heard final arguments in the now famous test case on the poultry code.

Accordingly, speculation turned to the probable time of the court's opinion. If it is rendered before Congress adjourns it would, of course, serve as a guide for efforts to repair the deficiencies, as in the "hot oil" case.

While this prospect was developing, President Green of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter to President Roosevelt, protested against the pending resolution extending the NRA's life for only ten months. He said this would amount to abandonment of the NRA and appealed to the President to stand firm for a two-year extension.

Action Appears Vital.

However, the court's action now appears to be vital. The NRA expires by law June 16. To extend it at all, before the court decides the test case, would now seem inappropriate. Rather, the prospect is that if extended meanwhile it may have to be revamped in the light of the court's opinion.

Donald R. Richberg, NRA board chairman, and Solicitor General Stanley Reed, concluded the Government's arguments yesterday, while Frederick H. Wood and Joseph Heller, both of New York, argued against the NRA on behalf of their client, the A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation, of New York.

From further questioning from the bench, it was made more evident than ever that the issue uppermost in the minds of the court was the broad, undefined delegation of power on which the entire NRA is based. Second is the question of whether wages and hours, at least in the poultry code, are beyond the reach of Congress under its power to regulate interstate commerce. The court below sustained conviction of the Schechters on 17 of 19 counts of code violation. It threw out the two vital counts, however, charging violation of wage and hour provisions, on the ground that they were beyond the power of Congress to prescribe.

Likened to "Hot Oil" Case.

However, should the court decide that the NRA act is invalid as a whole because of too great a delegation of power, the wage and hour issues would not have to be settled, at least at this time. In an 8-to-5 decision in the "hot oil" case, the court held that this section of the NRA was too broad a grant of its legislative power. From the questioning from the bench, the close analogy between this verdict and the issue raised in the pending test case was apparent. In fact, all the questions from the bench turned on this central point.

A crowded courtroom listened solemnly and attentively to Reed, Richberg and Wood yesterday. But Heller produced gales of laughter—the Chief Justice joining in—when he described "straight killing," at the request of Justice McReynolds.

A jury lawyer, earnest, obviously convinced that his clients had been wronged, Heller, by expression and gesture, lifted the dry legalism of the case into the realm of vivid and amusing realism. Asked by Justice McReynolds what "straight killing" meant, he looked surprised that everybody did not know. Then his eyes lighted. He discarded his heavy-word vocabulary to launch

Moves to Defeat Crime Study Gain; Garnett Files Hot Reply

By James D. Secrest.

The movement to defeat the recommendations of the House subcommittee that United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and the high command of the Metropolitan Police Department be replaced gained momentum yesterday as Garnett issued a formal reply to the sub-committee charges.

Developments of the day were:

Three justices of the District Supreme Court called on Attorney General Cummings in behalf of Garnett.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, of "gentlemen's agreement" fame, called on Cummings after making an attack on local newspaper "snoopers" on the House floor.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District committee, said he had heard of no complaints against Garnett prior to publication of the House subcommittee report.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was indorsed by several civic spokesmen called into conference by Sylvan King, chairman of a joint committee.

Inspector Lewis I. H. Edwards, mentioned as possible successor to Maj. Brown, said he would accept the superintendency if offered to him, but hoped to continue under Brown.

Garnett, in his defense, took up the testimony of each of his critics and answered it and then defended himself against general and specific charges made against him by the sub-committee.

"I am proud of my record as an officer and my reputation as a lawyer," he said. "I am entirely willing to submit my claims as a lawyer and officer, first, to the considered opinion of the judges of the Supreme Court of the District of

Youth's Extortion Plot Menaces Berlin, Sarnoff, William Fox

By the Associated Press.

Bridgeport, Conn., May 3.—Federal agents today ended a five months' hunt for the writer of threatening extortion letters to socially prominent New York and Connecticut families with the arrest of Peter Zmindak, a 22-year-old butcher's boy.

Zmindak, arrested at dawn after specimens of his handwriting showed him to be the author of the letters demanding a total of $37,000, has confessed, according to Rhea Whitley, head of Department of Justice agents in New York.

The youth, held in Fairfield County Jail under $45,000 bonds, sent the extortion letters to Ann Burr Jennings, Fairfield, Conn., heir to Standard Oil millions; Charles Shipman Payson, husband of the former Joan Whitney; Mrs. Henry W. Farnam, New Haven widow of a former Yale professor; Carl M. Loeb and Louis I. Strauss, New York brokers.

In each of the notes, the butcher's boy instructed that the money be either left at the desk of a local hotel or that a servant or employe of his intended victims wait in hotel lobbies to be "contacted."

Federal agents said other persons Zmindak apparently planned to write extortion notes to included:

Samuel P. Senior and Walter B. Lasher, of Bridgeport.

Sylvester Poli, of New Haven, theater owner.

By the Associated Press.

Charges were sounded in both wings of Congress yesterday that ship subsidies had been diverted from their purpose of building up the merchant marine by operators who put the money in their own pockets.

Postmaster General Farley loosed the first blast by submitting to the Senate through Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, a report that "too many of the contractors have diverted these grants or subsidies or by whatever name this aid may be called, to other than sound shipping operations."

About the same time, Representative Moran (Democrat), Maine, roared out in a hearing of the House Merchant Marine Committee that the new Copeland-Bland subsidy bill was being written by a "few powerful individuals enriched from the public treasury to the detriment of 100,000,000 American people."

Lobbying Charged.

While publication of the Farley report, compiled after months of study, was accepted by Black as emphasizing the need of an amendment to the subsidy bill, Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, expressed regret it had been made public at all.

Farley's report asserted that many operating companies, instead of using their mail subsidies to repay loans for new ships, had "employed lobbyists and special representatives at enormous fees" and had "paid high salaries and excessive dividends."

So much of the earnings of the companies had been diverted into subsidiaries, Farley charged, and so little private capital was supplied in the first place, that the companies were unable to carry out their agreed contracts to build new ships and probably could not do it without additional loans of $50,000,000 to $60,000,000.

Moran Reports Abuses.

"This would make the Government practically the owner of the shipping companies," the report declared, "because it would reduce their net worth ratio to where the capital, collectively, would only be about one-third of their fleet valuation, or less than one-half of the Government's equity."

The hearing on the twin bill before the House committee was marked by the assertions of Representative Moran that "it is my opinion that the pending legislation not only perpetuates the flagrant abuses of the past, but intensifies, magnifies and aggravates them."

Riled by Moran's attack, Chairman Bland (Democrat), Virginia, asserted:

"I expected you to make a ten-minute statement and not come here and make a vicious attack on the members of this honorable committee."

Work Plan Called 'Noble Experiment

Dr. Hettinger Critical in Cleveland Speech.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 3.—Dr. A. J. Hettinger, jr., Washington economist, described the $4,800,000,000 Federal work relief program as "just another noble experiment" in an address today before the Ohio Conference of Statisticians.

"We will end up with a much smaller contribution to employment, both direct and indirect, than the program promises," Dr. Hettinger predicted.

Dr. Suprgeon Bell, chief of the division of research and statistics of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, told the conference that urban mortgages on real estate, which dropped from 49 per cent of investments in 1928 to 2.7 per cent in 1934, are again on the increase.

Stephen M. Dumbrul, of the General Motors Corporation, Detroit, charged the NRA with lessening the annual earning opportunity of individual workmen in the automobile industry. He said the restriction of hours reduces the company's leeway for absorbing fluctuations in demand without changing the number of employes.

Between You and Me

Silverites Think They're Reasonable; Left Wing Week at White House; To Chamber: 'Phooey.'

By Raymond Clapper

SILVERITES are at it again. You don't have to know much about silver, and practically nobody does, to see what a mess the Administration has made trying to placate the handful of Western Senators who worship silver with irrational mysticism like wild tribes around a totem.

The Administration, despite the action which it has been taking in the face of serious misgivings among many officials, has been unable to satisfy the silverites, who again are sending up their familiar Macedonian cry, "Do something for silver." They want President Roosevelt to jump the silver price up from 77.57 cents an ounce to $1.29, and no monkey business about it, either.

Honestly, the silverites think they are being quite reasonable and restrained in this demand. So fanatical are they that what they really want is something like the Wheeler bill, which has been reported out of committee and is waiting threateningly on the Senate calendar. It would shove silver straight up $2.18 an ounce, which would bring it about even with the mooring mast on top of the Empire State Building.

And just yesterday some of the silverites flew off at a tangent and reported out of the Senate Agriculture Committee the Frazier-Lemke bill to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks on farm mortgages, which comes about as close to trying to imitate Germany's wild experience with paper marks as has been seen in this country.

Enough trouble is being caused by existing legislation, without considering into what difficulties proposed measures might lead. The Government is under a congressional mandate to purchase silver until the price reaches $1.29 an ounce or until silver stocks equal one-third of gold stocks.

Economists regard it as questionable whether this ratio of silver stocks to gold can be brought about. Gold continues to pour into the country, even though we don't want any more. The influx last year amounted to $872,000,000. Silver stocks increased only $580,000,000. The Treasury reserves stand today $1,400,000,000 in silver to $8,706,000,000 in gold or about 16 per cent. The goal is 33 1-3 per cent more than double present holdings, or more than that if the gold reserve goes up meantime.

* * * *

Price-lifting moves have had international repercussions, tending to force up prices in silver countries like China and in addition robbing them of their currency medium. In Mexico the real value of the peso was forced above its worth as coin and everyone melted up his money and sold it as bullion. However, in the case of Mexico, which is a heavy silver producer, the long run effect is beneficial in that it forces up the price of the country's major commodity.

Otherwise nobody gains except the speculators and some silver mine owners whose gain in many cases is offset by the fact that since silver is a by-product principally of lead and zinc, those two commodities become a drug on the market.

The United States has 60 per cent of the world's gold. Suppose it gathers up a large proportion of the world's silver, and brings out of hiding the vast hordes of India, what is gained? We round up all of the gold and all of the silver and then the rest of the world shifts over to managed currencies, commodity dollars, shells or wampum and we are left sitting on top of a mountain of metal that nobody can eat, that provides work for no one except the watchmen around the vaults.

* * * *

One economist thinks the silverite case is so devoid of reason and so governed by political emotionalism that he favors a campaign to brand silver as something to be shunned. He would call it evil money, the kind used by Judas to betray Christ.

"That isn't very logical, but it's an argument about on the level of most of the silver arguments," he says.

Callers this week included the LaFollette brothers, who were the first to bring in a carefully considered State plan for public works, which, if it is approved, will put Wisconsin far ahead of the country in intelligent works planning; Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for President, who said he found Mr. Roosevelt more sympathetic to the troubles of tenant farmers than the Agriculture Department William Green and A. Mr. Roosevelt said a mouthful to the members of the Business Advisory Committee who called immediately after the Chamber of Commerce convention to assure him of their support of NRA and social security legislation. . . . On the night that Mrs. Roosevelt, numerous high officials and a thousand others gathered to pay tribute to Miss Jane Addams for a life devoted to helping the unfortunate and in trying to eliminate some human misery and suffering, the National Patriotic Council issued a statement calling her a "subversive influence." Sustaining members of the council could well afford to invest in the services of a good press agent. One who likewise knew his business would never have let that one get by.

When the Supreme Court was hearing the gold clause arguments, justices asked questions which were widely heralded as indicating the attitude they probably would take in deciding the case. Those questions were the basis of the advance and unprecedented speculation concerning the decision and caused considerable embarrassment.

Maybe that is why spectators attending the arguments on the Schecter NRA case this week were unable to hear many of the questions from the bench. Or perhaps the justices are all worn out and just don't feel like speaking up now.

Dr. Sizoo Selected For British Tour

Among 17 Going Abroad for Good-Will Visitation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—Plans were announced tonight for sending 17 ministers abroad this summer to represent this country in the annual good-will interchange of preachers among Great Britain, France and the United States.

Dr. Joseph K. Sizoo, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington, will represent America in the leading churches of Great Britain as guest of the British Council of Interchange.

Plans for the interchange, which will bring six English and Scottish preachers to North America, were made jointly by the World Alliance for International Friendship, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and the Church Peace Union, the latter acting as executive agency.

D.C. Heads Approve Sanatorium Plans

Bids on Underground Work to Be Asked Soon.

Plans and specifications for underground work on the District Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., were approved yesterday by District Commissioners.

Bids are expected to be invited next week. It is estimated the work, which includes construction of tunnels to connect with the adjoining children's sanatorium, will cost $200,000.

Meanwhile, work has been going forward on plans for the hospital building and these are expected to be completed, advertised and under contract by time the underground work has been completed, it was said.

Col. Daniel I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, said work on the sanatorium is progressing approximately on schedule prescribed by Secretary of Interior Ickes, public works administrator.

Spanking Ordered In Wedding of Boy

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—George L. Muller, 18, appeared in Supreme Court today to ask an annulment of his marriage to Nora Keefe Muller, 37.

The youth charged his wife, before their marriage in Philadelphia on March 5, assured him she had not been previously married, but he said he had since discovered she has a son 17 years old.

Justice Meyer Steinbrink called Muller's sister, Mrs. Dorothy Caputy, before the bench and said:

"Go home and tell your parents to take this kid out in the woodshed and spank him. This is the sort of foolishness which fills the courts. Decision reserved."

474 Postoffices Added To Patronage Column

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday was given the right to appoint 474 additional postmasters when the Postoffice Department raised that many fourth class postoffices to third class.

The department, under Postmaster General Farley, the patronage dispenser for the Administration, said improved business made it possible to raise the ratings of the postoffices, some of which were reduced from third to fourth class during less busy years.

The salary scale for third class offices ranges, according to receipts, from $1,100 to $2,300 per year.

Sprague's View Of Banking Act Stirs Senators

Witness, Summoned by Glass, Says He Sees No Need of Contested Title.

The complacency with which Prof. Oliver M. W. Sprague, former New Deal monetary expert, views the pending banking act of 1935 seemed to surprise members of the Senate banking sub-committee when he appeared as a witness yesterday. He was summoned by Senator Glass, foe of the bill's Title II, which would centralize the open market and other monetary powers in the Federal Reserve Board.

However, the former Treasury assistant, now back on the Harvard faculty, said he saw no urgent need for the enactment of Title II, and felt the regional reserve banks should remain autonomous, especially in being able to reject buying or selling of Government bonds in open market operations.

He was equally complacent about paying the bonus in greenbacks—or, rather, fatalistic. At all events, he said the effect would not necessarily be evil, unless it created fear of paper inflation.

The veteran professor, who broke with the New Deal shortly after the London economic conference, to which he went on a vain mission to stabilize exchange, said he felt the banking bill followed the trend all over the world toward central banking and monetary management.

House Hears Debate.

Meanwhile the House continued its debate on the measure, with champions of State banks opposing the proviso that to keep Federal deposit insurance the State banks must enter the Reserve System. The President has privately told members of the Senate Banking Committee that he would insist on this unification or else veto the bill. The bill is due to pass the House next week.

During the day officials of the American Bankers Association called at the White House to tell the President that the "log jam" of private financing is now "definitely broken." President Rudolf S. Hecht and Vice Presidents Robert V. Fleming and Tom K. Smith reported to the President, according to Mr. Hecht, that:

"Money is plentiful and banks are anxious to get loans. There was more private financing in April than in several years for that month. I think you can say that the private financing log jam is definitely broken. The economic situation is better generally. The natural vitality of the country has done much to bring about the improved conditions. Bankers are now spending more time looking to the making of loans whereas formerly most of their time was spent in getting deposits."

Eccles Letter Published.

Gov. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board made public a letter to Mr. Hecht, refuting printed reports that the banking bill would permit the board to drain credit from overproducing industry into other channels. There is no warrant whatever for the idea that the bill contemplates such use of powers, he said.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, in a statement last night indorsed an amendment to the banking bill to direct the Federal Reserve Board to restore the purchasing power of the dollar to the 1921-1929 average.

"This amendment would add to the bill the lever of gold prices control through means of an open market for gold and silver," he said. "Such a market has been found indispensible by Great Britain in the management of its money. By such currency management Great Britain is restoring prosperity to a large part of the world. We should have the same thing here."

The amendment was proposed by Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland.

By the Associated Press.

Silence yesterday met a charge by Representative McLeod (Republican), Michigan, that J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, had written House members that it was time to "get rid of" McLeod.

At the office of the Comptroller, officials said there would be "no comment."

McLeod had charged in a House speech that O'Connor had inferred in letters that the Michigan member had made himself a nuisance to the Comptroller by pressing his measure last year to have the Reconstruction Corporation pay off depositors in closed banks, and in other ways.

The Michigan Republican told the House yesterday that present liquidation machinery should be abolished because under it bank depositors were likely to lose $2,000,000,000.

"Receivers under existing law," McLeod said, "are not in a position to hold assets."

Owsley, Harrison Get Foreign Posts

One Going to Free State, Other to Rumania.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Alvin Mansfield Owsley, of Texas, to be Minister to the Irish Free State, and Leland Harrison, of Illinois, to be Minister to Rumania.

A former national commander of the American Legion, Owsley will succeed the late W. W. McDowell, of Butte, Mont. His appointment was predicted several days ago.

Harrison is a former Assistant Secretary of State, serving 23 years in the foreign service before becoming chief of the International Relations Section of the Tariff Commission five years ago.

His diplomatic career includes service as American Minister to Sweden and Uruguay. In addition, he represented this country at the Peace Conference in Paris and at the Washington Arms Conference.

Long Excluded At Session Here On Third Party

Left Wingers Meet Today to Talk of 1936; Nye to Attend.

By the Associated Press.

With Senator Huey Long pointedly excluded, liberal factions converged on the Capital last night to talk today of third party possibilities and seek a basis for united action in 1936.

Watching for indicative signs from this meeting called by four aggressively left wing House members, political Washington pondered also the political consequences of the forthright split between President Roosevelt and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Foremost in the speculation was Postmaster General Farley's assertion that big business had been expected to line up against the President. It brought predictions from observers that if 1936 sees an outright battle between Mr. Roosevelt and business leaders, it also will see the President turning more to the left.

Today's meeting was called by Representatives Marcantonio (Republican), New York; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Amlie (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Schneider (Progressive), Wisconsin, with the assistance of Howard Y. Williams, National Farm-Labor Party organizer.

Nye to Attend.

"Its purpose," Marcantonio said, "is to reach a concensus of what action the liberals should take in 1936."

It will be attended by representatives of virtually every leftward school of thought in American politics, including representatives of the Socialist party. Men connected with the American Federation of Labor also are expected.

Senator Nye (Republican, North Dakota), who has been mentioned as a possible third-party candidate, said yesterday he planned to be present. Senator LaFollette (Progressive, Wisconsin), also among those suggested as possibilities, said an out-of-town speaking engagement would prevent his attending.

As for Senator Long, one of the backers of the meeting bristled at a question whether the Louisianan had been invited.

"Oh, no, no," he said, "this is a serious effort to get the various liberal groups into an accord which will make things easier next year."

Huey Just Snorts.

He also let drop some comments regarding "unfulfillable promises" and "unworkable programs." Long's only reply to a question about the meeting and his attitude toward it was a snort.

Congresional Democratic leaders were hesitant to discuss the implications of the split between the President and the Chamber of Commerce.

"That was to be expected," said Senator Nye, "and it looks like it may result in a little more liberal attitude on the part of the President."

Senator Norris, dean of the liberal group, said the situation did not "worry" him, adding it was to be expected that the interests prominent in the chamber would be opposed to liberal policies.

Frazier-Lemke Mortgage Bill Goes to Senate

Measure Objectionable to White House Goes on Calendar.

The Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, calling for a $3,000,000,000 currency inflation, yesterday was favorably reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee without a record vote, following similar action by the House Agriculture Committee.

Unwanted by the Administration, and regarded as having little chance of passing, the bill, nevertheless, receives a calendar status that will make it a consistent threat to the Senate and House leadership.

The proposed $3,000,000,000 Federal Reserve note issued would be secured by first mortgages on farms. Mortgages could equal the fair value of the farms, plus 75 per cent of the value of insurable buildings and improvements.

Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, coauthor of the measure, said he will move later this session to call up the measure or offer it as a "rider" on some other bill.

The Farm Credit Administration, under terms of the bill, would take up, liquidate and refinance farm mortgage indebtedness, including chattel mortgages. Loans would bear a rate of 1½ per cent interest to farmers and 1½ per cent principal payment over an amortization period of about 45 years, and 3 per cent interest on livestock. Farm loan bonds would be issued by the Farm Credit Administration to finance the transaction. Federal Reserve Banks or national banks would be required to invest their available surpluses and net profits after dividends in these bonds.

The Senate Agriculture Committee also approved a bill by Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Laborite), of Minnesota, to require that interest and debt payments be taken into account in establishing the parity price for agricultural commodities under the AAA act.

Farmers Held 'Pikers' in Curb On Production

Davis Claims Industrialists Have Assumed Lead in Curtailment.

By the United Press.

Columbia, Mo., May 3.—Farmers have been "pikers" in the plowing under program compared with America's big industrialists, Chester C. Davis, Agricultural Adjustment Administrator, tonight told the University of Missouri annual Journalism week banquet.

"It is high time that the public be disabused of the idea that the farmer is the first and greatest reducer of production in the history of the country," Davis said. "When it comes to reducing production in order to maintain prices the farmer is a piker compared to some of the big industrialists of this country."

The AAA chieftain pointed out that before farm crops were curtailed the harder the farmers worked the larger grew the surpluses for which there were no markets. The eight-hour day, common in industry, is still a long ways off for the farmer, he said.

"The farmer is continuing to fulfill his job of producing the essential food and fiber of the Nation," Davis said. "Those adjustment payments are simply the means of adding substantially to the market price received by the cooperating farmer in order that he who adjusts his effort for the good of all may be rewarded over the one who fails to cooperate."

He said the Administration's recovery measure had the sole base of increasing mass purchasing power of great economic groups which had lost it. To this end, Davis said, the Administration had sponsored the AAA for farmers, NRA for city workers, the pending social security legislation and the proposed amendments to the AAA.

He explained that it was the duty of the press to inform the public of two fundamental changes in American agriculture which indirectly affect every home, the sharp restriction of export outlets and the rapid technological improvement of the last 20 years.

Davis explained that only two solutions were possible from this "inescapable dilemma"—either farmers could organize collectively to restore farm income or they could, by the sheer force of competition, drive out millions of people through bankruptcy. The AAA supported the first alternative, and farmers elected to support it, he said.

Tariffs, Davis said, were of use to farmers only when the domestic demand had taken up the surpluses and brought prices up to at least the level of the world price plus the tariff.

Anti-War Profit Bill Put Aside For Flynn Plan

Senate Munitions Group Favorably Reports Idea to Levy Drastic Tax.

By the Associated Press.

Shoving aside the House-approved McSwain-Baruch anti-war profits measure, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday favorably reported its "Flynn plan" bill levying drastic taxes on individuals and industry in war time and giving the Government authority to conscript captains of industry.

The committee also asked for $45,000 additional to continue its investigation, which already has cost around $100,000.

Chairman Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, said enough of the last $50,000 grant remained to complete the study of the part banks played in American entrance into the World War, but more funds would be needed to study proposed nationalization of the munitions industry.

In general, the committee's bill was the same as that originally submitted by John T. Flynn, its economist adviser. But under the guidance of Treasury officials, the new rates of war-time taxation were superimposed upon the present income tax law.

Inflation Ban Is Aim.

"It should be kept in mind," the committee said in its report, "that the object of this bill is not primarily to limit profits, but to collect during the war by means of taxation enough taxes to pay the cost of the war and thus prevent the inflation by doing away with borrowing and the immense increase in the cost of the war which results from the inflation.

"Therefore the policy of this bill is to tax those who have the means in accordance with their ability to pay, just as we raise our soldiers from amongst that part of the population—the younger and more vigorous men—according to their ability to fight."

The bill would increase the normal tax on individuals from 4 to 6 per cent and cut personal exemptions for a single person from $1,000 as at present to $500, and the exemption of married couples from $2,500 to $1,000. The exemption for dependents in turn would be cut from $400 to $100.

Surtax rates would begin at $3,000 instead of $4,000 as in the present law, applying a levy that would graduate upward at the rate of about 10 per cent for each additional thousand.

$10,000 Limit on Earnings.

A virtual top of $10,000 of net earnings for any individual would be fixed by the bill, although it said "the usual allowances for the payment of interest and taxes are continued, together with most of the existing reasonable and just allowances for dependents, wife, losses, charities."

The tax on corporations would be 15 per cent on the first 2 per cent of net income after deductions; 25 per cent on all income above 2 per cent and up to 6 per cent, and 99 per cent on all income above that, as an excess profits tax.

"Here again," the report said, "it is important to call attention to the fact that while this will limit the amount which a corporation will be permitted to distribute to its stockholders, it does not limit the profits which a corporation may make. * * * Its profits will depend upon the prices it can command, the prices it must pay for labor and materials, and its own prudent management."

The committee did not write in any labor conscription provisions, explaining that the general mobilization feature is being studied by the committee in its examination of the War Department war plans.

A Triumph Over Baruch.

The bill represented a triumph for Flynn over the war-eperienced financier, Bernard M. Baruch, whose plans for curbing profits by fixing a "ceiling" over prices was incorporated in the McSwain bill passed by the House.

"The committee is of the firm conviction," the report said, referring to the Baruch plan, "engendered by its months of investigation and study, that the mere fixing of prices, or setting of a 'ceiling,' will be horribly ineffective in the attainment of the ends for which this proposed bill was drafted."

The bill would give the President power to close exchanges to prevent speculation, and to direct all movement of commodities for the best interests of the Government. These provisions, together with proposals for priority in purchasing, licensing of industry, commandeering of industry, and price fixing were taken from the McSwain bill.

Roosevelt Reassures On Border Neutrality

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday put the label "closed incident" on the furore which ensued from an Army officer's testimony before a congressional committee that plans were to establish an air base on the Canadian border and seize nearby British possessions in the event of war.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt expressed hope that his letter rebuking the House Military Affairs Committee for making public testimony given in secret session had been widely read, not only in Canada, but other countries as well.

He added that the United States would do nothing to arm itself offensively or defensively against Canada.

struggle for world peace, gave the incomplete results of a survey being conducted in the British Isles. Ninety-seven per cent of the 7,250,000 citizens canvassed to date favor continuance of the League of Nations, he said. More than 90 per cent desire reduction of armaments and oppose their manufacture and sale for profit.

Favor Economic Pressure.

The same proportion signified their willingness to apply economic pressure against an aggressive nation. About one-half favored the abolition of aerial warfare. A majority of 3 to 1 said they would take part in international military action against a country which insists upon attacking another one.

"I have no doubt," said Viscount Cecil, "that these results accurately reflect the settled opinion of this country. Let all international lawbreakers take note."

Henderson, who has promoted the cause of disarmament at Geneva since 1931, said: "I do not suggest or believe that war is imminent, but in a very definite sense the nations are at the partings of the ways."

"The world is in danger of slipping back into the policy and methods which resulted in the Great War," he said. "The policy of bigger and more destructive armaments is now being actively pursued by nations which are solemnly pledged to peace, but bigger armaments do not guarantee national safety from war."

Speech Translated.

Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, translated the speech of Mme. Krupskaya, widow of Lenin.

"We still believe," said the latter in Russian, "that nothing but the complete disarmament will be an effective guarantee of peace. We have never slackened in the struggle for general disarmament against the headlong race for armament now being renewed with still greater force but we cherish no illusions."

Speaking very good English—he was educated in England—Prince Tokugawa bestowed warm praise upon the W. I. L. and said the difficulty of attaining peace and freedom "should be a stimulant to exert our utmost efforts to attain the objective."

Senator Paul Boncour deplored the failure of the disarmament conference, abrogation of treaties and armament races.

In French, translated by a radio announcer, he reviewed the founding of the Women's International League and lauded its members' activities.

"The universal homage tendered to Miss Jane Addams and to the league prove that no matter how hard hearts may be, nor how blind the eyes of the people, this work is not a sentimental vanity," he said. The resignation of countries to "renewed butcheries" he branded as cowardice.

Rain began falling and umbrellas went up in the crowd, hundreds seated and a greater number standing behind ropes, as Davis began his three-minute address. In it he eulogized Miss Addams, who "held to her faith in democracy, a faith which is being vindicated by the progressive recovery we are now witnessing."

Miss Addams' remarks were devoted to praising the speakers who preceded her. She concluded: "The Women's International League joins a long procession of those who have endeavored for hundreds of years to substitute law for war, political processes for brute force, and we are grateful to our friends from various parts of the world who recognize at least our sincerity in this long effort."

Youths Hold Banners.

Only two banners were noted in the throng. One proclaimed, "Scholarships, Not Battleships;" the other, "Schools, Not Battleships." Both were held aloft by young persons.

Immediately following the one-hour program in McPherson Square, a youth delegation marched on the White House to petition the President to "take the lead in reducing armaments in these days of international crisis, and to blaze a path toward a new international unity."

They and their petition were received by Marvin H. McIntyre, of the President's secretariat.

Senator Gerald P. Nye and Representatives Biermann, Kloeb and Marcantonio spoke at the informal supper held last night in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A. The closing event of the day was a reception at the Phillips Memorial Gallery, at which brief talks were delivered by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Lucy Biddle Lewis, Rosika Schwimmer, Ruth Gage Colby and Mrs. Frank Frost.

With the U. S. Fleet in Pacific Maneuvers, May 3.—Admiral Harris Laning, noted strategist, was moving westward across the North Pacific tonight the most powerful force in the maneuvers of the 153 warships engaged in six weeks of training exercises.

The strongest unit in the main battle line is Division Three, the dreadnaughts New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho. Built and commissioned between 1917 and 1919, at costs ranging from $13,000,000 to $17,000,000, these three battleships recently have been modernized.

It is the only homogeneous dreadnaught division in the Navy, the 642-foot ships being relatively similar, with a speed of more than 22 knots, fastest of the dreadnaughts, having four three-gun turrets, a main armament of twelve 14-inch guns, supplemented by twelve 5-inch guns, eight 5-inch anti-aircraft rifles and twelve 50-caliber anti-aircraft weapons.

These are the heaviest of the dreadnaughts, being in excess of 33,000 tons, with 18-inch armor plate around the turrets, 16-inch armor at the conning tower and 14-inch belt armor.

Their complement is 1,323 men. Their forward superstructure is more like a modern skyscraper than the older type tripod or cage masts which mark the other dreadnaughts.

While the last three dreadnaughts built for the Navy in 1920-21 and 1922—the West Virginia, Colorado and Maryland—carry eight 16-inch guns, in four turrets of two guns each, naval strategists rate Division Three—the New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho—even more powerful than the big-gun Division Four.

Vinson Bonus Gains Support; Senate Recesses

flation fears unless it were done "grudgingly" by the Administration.

As sentiment for the Vinson bill gathered strength, Administration Senators sought to liberalize the Harrison compromise to improve its chances. An amendment by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, to cut the interest rate on bonus loans from 4 to 2 per cent, would increase the outlay under the Harrison measure by some $90,000,000.

The pending Vinson bill cancels all interest on loans, more liberal in this respect than the Patman measure, which suspends interest only from October, 1931.

A number of amendments to the Vinson measure were defeated without record votes. One, by Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, would have given the President power to adjust World War debts to this country downward, devoting any receipts to bonus payment. Another, by Senator Park Trammell (Democrat), Florida, would have given veterans the right to hold their certificates, at 3 per cent interest.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, former national commander of the American Legion, one-time House parliamentarian and the son of a famous Speaker, sponsored the Vinson bill, but contented himself with one short speech in its favor. His plan would pay veterans the full cash value of certificates unborrowed against. Where veterans had borrowed up to 50 per cent on the average $1,000 certificate, they would receive $500 under the Vinson bill, $487 under the Patman bill and $210 immediately under the amended Harrison compromise.

Huey Long, of Louisiana, joined Thomas in the drive to liberalize the Vinson measure, and vainly sought to force an immediate Vinson bill vote by blocking Majority Leader Robinson's move to recess until Monday.

"They want this time to give the President a chance to go to work on the Senators," bellowed Huey.

But Robinson's motion prevailed.

Maverick Accuses 'Admirals' Of Thwarting Neutrality Bills

Texan Invites Navy Men to Stay Aloof From Diplomatic Issues.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday "the admirals" are trying to block his proposal that a declared policy of strict neutrality in foreign wars be linked to the new programs to increase America's military and naval strength.

Maverick is author of two neutrality measures. Describing admirals as "cultured" people of "good family" and "trained in a narrow groove from the age of 17 in the Naval Academy," he said they were purely technical men and had no business mixing in foreign policy.

"They've claimed that at present we have laws sufficient to assure our neutrality," Maverick said. "Well, we don't.

"I think the State Department has able men. Foreign affairs should be left to them.

"These admirals want the Navy to be 'the mistress of the seas' or something like that, and they are willing to go to any length—such as sending gunboats up the Yangtze River to save the Chinese from Communism."

"There is a very definite need for neutrality legislation right now," the Texan insisted. "If we are going to spend these big sums on the Army and Navy, we should at the same time adopt legislation specifying that it shall be for defense only."

Loss of Stop Watch Discommodes House

By the Associated Press.

The House came near to being disrupted yesterday—the Speaker's stop watch disappeared.

That is the handy little instrument which enables the presiding officer to stop speeches when time is up.

Search high and low failed to turn up the watch, kept in a clerk's drawer in the Speaker's offices. About the time it was thought a runner would have to be sent downtown to buy a new one, an old watch with a broken crystal was found and the House proceeded with debate.

Nazis' Air Race To Cost Britain $116,000,000

London Figures It Needs 600 Planes to Reach Parity with Berlin.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, May 3.—A high British source, close to the Air Ministry, said tonight Britain must spend £24,000,000 ($116,000,000) for 600 fighting planes if she is to fulfill the government's pledge to maintain air equality with Germany.

That authoritative estimate was put forward shortly after receipt of authentic information from Berlin that Germany now has facilities for building 100 planes monthly for replacements, and may soon speed the pace to 200 planes.

Acting swiftly to convert into safeguards its increasing apprehension on Germany's rearmament, the government prepared the draft of an "air Locarno"—an alliance providing for immediate reprisals against aggression from the skies—to be submitted to France, Italy, Belgium and Germany.

Other developments were:

1. The Air Ministry launched its program for substantial increases in British fighting planes, airdromes and Royal Air Force personnel, expecting to present it to Parliament within two weeks.

2. Government departments were instructed to keep close watch on all phases of German rearmament, this in view of official admissions that Britain still did not know whether it had full information concerning Adolf Hitler's objectives.

3. Informed quarters said they did not think the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact, signed yesterday and made public today, would impede Germany's entrance into nonaggression agreements, since Hitler recently indicated he would not consider such conventions as any barrier.

4. Naval circles voiced the opinion the British Navy ought to be built up along with the air force, if Britain is to enjoy security.

5. Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail urged intensive strengthening of all defense equipment and asked David Lloyd George's inclusion in the cabinet to supervise rearmament, while the Daily Express asserted hope for world peace lay in British-American understanding.

An outlay of £24,000,000, necessary if Britain is to match Germany plane for plane as MacDonald and Lord President of the Council Stanley Baldwin both have promised, would provide for corresponding expansion in royal air force personnel and bases, it was said on high authority.

France Rules Measure.

The French air fleet, this source asserted, probably would be the yardstick by which Germany's fleet could be measured, this on the assumption that Hitler's secret program is designed to keep abreast of France. It was recalled that Hitler, in his recent talk with Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, demanded parity with France.

At the same time Britain will make an effort to halt the headlong air armaments race. The proposed "air Locarno," it was revealed, would include an agreement to halt airplane construction.

The air ministry, however, was understood to be taking the government's promise to attain air equality at the earliest possible moment at its face value, making recommendation on this basis.

The Royal Air Force now has only 370 regular home defense planes. It counts an additional 60 allotted to the army and 20 flying boats not under air ministry control. Under existing plans, the total will be raised to 830 by March 31, 1939.

Auxiliary Has 130 Planes.

An additional auxiliary force of 130 planes is not counted since the pilots and crews are volunteers, flying in their spare time. They are not regarded as ready for service.

The present first-line strength of France is 1,670 planes, of which 1,400 are stationed in France and Northern Africa. In order to match that figure, the yardstick of the German fleet, Britain's home defense strength would have to be increased by 570 ships in addition to the increases already voted in the 1935-36 air estimates.

It was understood the ministry was confident the government would take France as its example, but officials pointed out increases on that basis would not take into consideration France's probable concurrent expansion. Despite MacDonald's unreserved promise to keep pace with Germany, some uneasiness was voiced as to just how far the cabinet would go at present, this because of the government's air pact plans.

Reich and Poland Exchange Spies

Sosnowski, Polish Baron, Traded for 3 Germans.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 3.—George Sosnowski, the Polish baron termed by secret police "one of the most dangerous spies in Europe," has been traded for three German spies held in Poland, it was disclosed today.

One of the three, it was revealed, was Frau Theodora Ogurek Drazga, 20-year-old Polish-born peasant girl whose love for the Germany of her parents was so great she voluntarily offered herself for the perilous work of espionage.

The girl escaped execution for her spying in Poland only through her marriage to Ernst Drazga, native German arrested with her in 1933. Drazga was another of the three exchanged for Sosnowski. Identity of the third spy was not immediately made public. It was Sosnowski who brought two German noblewomen, Baroness Benita von Falkenhayn and Frau Renate von Natzmer, into the espionage circle and ultimately to the headsman's block.

Text of Mutual Assistance Treaty Linking French and Soviet Armies

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 3.—Following is the text of the Franco-Russian mutual assistance accord:

The Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and the President of the French Republic, impelled by the desire to consolidate peace in Europe and insure its blessings to their respective countries by enforcing more completely strict application of the provisions of the covenant of the League of Nations, intended to maintain national security, territorial integrity and political independence of states; and,

Determined to devote their efforts to the preparation and conclusion of a European agreement for that purpose, and in the meantime to promote to the extent of their ability the efficient workings of the provisions of the league covenant,

Have decided to conclude a treaty to that end, and have appointed their plenipotentiaries, to wit:

The Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R.:

Vladimir Potemkin, member of the Central Executive Committee, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the U. S. S. R., to the President of the French Republic, and

The President of the French Republic,

Pierre Laval, senator, minister of foreign affairs, who, having exchanged their credentials, found to be due and in proper form, have agreed upon the following provisions:

ARTICLE 1.

In the event of France or the U. S. S. R. being threatened with, or in danger of aggression on the part of any European state, the U. S. S. R., and reciprocally France, undertake mutually to proceed to immediate consultation in regard to measures to be taken for the enforcement of Article 10 of the League of Nations covenant.

ARTICLE 2.

In the event France or the U. S. S. R., under circumstances specified in Article 15, Section 7, of the league covenant, being subjected, in spite of the genuinely peaceful intentions of both countries, to an unprovoked aggression on the part of any European state, the U. S. S. R., and reciprocally France, shall immediately come to each other's aid and assistance.

ARTICLE 3.

In consideration of the fact that under Article 16 of the league covenant any member of the league having recourse to war, contrary to pledges given under Articles 12, 13, or 15 of the covenant, is ipso facto considered as having committed an act of war against all other members of the league, France, and reciprocally the U. S. S. R., agree in the event of one of them being subjected, under these conditions, and in spite of the genuinely peaceful intentions of both countries, to an unprovoked aggression on the part of any European state, to lend each other aid and assistance in application of Article 16 of the covenant.

The same obligation is assumed in the event of France or the U. S. S. R. being subjected to aggression on the part of any European state in circumstances specified in Article 17, Sections 1 and 3, of the league covenant.

ARTICLE 4.

The undertakings stipulated above being consonant with obligations of the high contracting parties as member of the League of Nations, nothing in this treaty shall be interpreted as restricting the duty of the latter to take proper measures efficiently to safeguard peace in the world, or as restricting obligations laid upon the high contracting parties of the League of Nations.

ARTICLE 5.

This treaty, of which the French and Russian versions are equally valid, shall be ratified, and the instruments of ratification exchanged at Moscow as soon as possible. It shall be registered at the secretariat of the League of Nations.

It will come into force as soon as the ratifications have been exchanged and will remain operative for five years. If it is not denounced by either of the high contracting parties giving notice thereof at least one year before the expiration of that period, it will remain in force indefinitely, each of the high contracting parties being at liberty to terminate it at a year's notice by a declaration to that effect.

It witness whereof, the plenipotentiaries have signed and sealed this treaty.

Done in Paris, May 2, 1935.

The text of the protocol of signature follows:

1. It is understood that the effect of Article 3 is to oblige each contracting party immediately to come to the assistance of the other, by immediately complying with recommendations of the league Council, as soon as they have been issued under Article 16 of the covenant.

It is further understood that the two contracting parties shall take joint action to obtain that the Council shall issue their recommendations with all speed required by circumstances, and that should the council nevertheless, for whatever reason, issue no recommendation or fail to reach a unanimous decision, the obligation of assistance shall apply none the less.

It is also understood that undertakings of assistance in this treaty refer only to cases of aggression against either of the contracting parties' own territory.

2. The common intention of both governments being in no way to invalidate by this treaty any obligations undertaken by France and by the U. S. S. R. in respect of third parties, under treaties that have been published, it is understood that provisions of the aforesaid treaty shall not be carried out in any way which, being inconsistent with treaty obligations undertaken by one of the contracting parties, might expose the latter to sanctions of international character.

Favor Broader Treaty.

3. The two governments, feeling the desirability of the conclusion of a local agreement aiming at the organization of security as between the contracting states, and liable to embody or be accompanied by additional pledges of mutual assistance, leave it open to each other to become parties by mutual consent, should occasion arise, to like agreement in any form, whether direct or indirect, that may seem appropriate, the obligations under such several agreements to take the place of those resulting from this treaty.

4. The two governments put on record that the negotiations which have just resulted in the signature of this treaty, were primarily entered upon in order to complete a security agreement comprising all countries of Northeastern Europe—the U. S. S. R., Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Baltic states bordering upon the U. S. S. R.; besides this agreement, there was to have been concluded a treaty of assistance between the U. S. S. R., France and Germany, under which each of these three states would be pledged to come to the assistance of any one of them subjected to an aggression on the part of one of these three states.

Aid to Either's Foe Banned.

Although the circumstances have not hitherto permitted the conclusion of these agreements which the two parties still look upon as desirable, it remains a fact, nevertheless, that the undertakings set forth in the Franco-Soviet treaty of assistance should be understood to come into play only within the limits contemplated in the tripartite agreement previously projected.

Apart from the obligations resulting from this treaty, it is called to mind at the same time that in accordance with the Franco-Soviet pact of nonaggression, signed November 29, 1932, and without prejudice to the universal character of the undertakings under that pact in the event of either of the two parties being subjected to aggression on the part of one or several third European powers not referred to in the above-mentioned tripartite agreement, the other contracting party will have to refrain from extending any aid or assistance, direct or indirect, to the aggressor or aggressors, each party, moreover, declaring itself to be bound by no agreement of assistance which is inconsistent with this undertaking.

Done in Paris, May 2, 1935.

Leaders Seized In Philippines Insurrection

Uprising Is Believed to Be Broken; Death Toll Is 59.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, May 4 (Saturday).—The arrest of several leaders and issuance of a warrant for a woman insurgent credited with directing the seizure of weapons from six American sailors to help the rebel cause apparently broke a revolt today in which at least 59 were killed.

Constabulary troops, however, kept watchful eyes on several hundred of the defeated extremists, members of the Sakdalista, reported assembling in a savage mood at Calambra, south of here.

Vague rumors that the extremists were aided by Japanese were scouted promptly by Atushi Kimura, Japanese consul general here. Officers said, however, that "misguided" Sakdalistas had contributed small sums of money to the cause when agitators told them it would be used to "rent" rifles from Japan.

In addition to the dead, 64 were wounded and there were unconfirmed reports still more lives had been lost outside the main areas of conflict. Ten troopers were among the wounded.

Sakdalista leaders not arrested went into hiding, but not until after their well-timed uprising—during the absence of many high government leaders—had resulted in the seizure of several towns.

The woman leader, Salud Argrave, allegedly caused insurgents to commandeer weapons from six American sailors who were motoring through Cabuyao, Laguna Province, while the town temporarily was in rebel hands.

The fighting at Cabuyao develope into a one-sided slaughter of Sakdalistas, although several hundred of them were pitted against only 35 troopers. Fifty-two of the insurgent dead fell there.

For several hours the insurgents, rising in opposition to the projected new commonwealth government and Senator Manuel Quezon, foremost contender for the presidency, held Cabuyao and Santa Rosa, scene of the fiercest fighting.

They also held sway in San Ildefonso, Bulacan Province north of here, for a time, hauling down the American flag there and proclaimed Philippine "independence." They started to set up a sort of socialistic regime, but government officials soon moved against them successfully.

Gov. Ramon Samonte of Cavite Province was seized and held for a short time by insurgents there.

Political effects of the uprising cropped out quickly.

A public dinner at which it was understood Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo would announce his candidacy for the Commonwealth presidency was canceled because some of his backers reputedly had planned to ask Sakdalista support for him.

Widely scattered high government officials learned about the uprising only by cable, telephone and press dispatches.

Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy was ill in White Sulphur Springs, Va. Quezon was in New York City. Acting Gov. Gen. Joseph R. Hayden was in a mountain province on an inspection trip. Maj. Gen. Frank Parker was in China. Various high Filipino officials were scattered about the islands campaigning for the ratification of the Commonwealth constitution at the plebiscite to be held May 14.

Deny Radical Leanings.

Although Sakdalista leaders have stoutly denied any Communistic leanings, authorities said they had been exploited by agitators with Red aims.

Farm laborers and village dwellers made up the insurgent group.

The word sakdal, roughly translated from the Tagalog dialect, means "I accuse." They were described as numbering somewhere between 10,000 and 20,000.

If the constitution is ratified in the May 14 plebiscite, a transitional government soon will be set up to serve the islands for ten years, after which it is destined to become an independent republic.

Blast Rains Rocks On Pupils; 1 Hurt

Explosion at Recess Drives Stone Through Auto Top.

Students at the Frances Junior High School were endangered yesterday, one was slightly injured, and an automobile was damaged when heavy rocks showered the neighborhood from blasting operations on the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway extensions near K street northwest.

Alberta Lawson, colored, 15, of 1804 T street northwest, was struck by a flying fragment. She was not seriously hurt. A parked car was damaged when a 15-pound rock crashed through the top. Workmen at the new project said a heavy charge of dynamite was used to loosen the rockbed.

The blast occurred during morning recess at the school. The children, as the bell rang, lined up to reenter the building. The explosion was heard and a moment later the school yard was showered by stone and dirt.

Mechem Bids For Arlington County Board

Candidate Lists Platform; Deadline Today for Voters' Poll Tax.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Thomas R. Mechem, a resident of Arlington County for 12 years, announced last night that he would be a Democratic candidate for the county board in the primary August 6. At the same time, he outlined his platform.

He said he favored the elimination of all dumps in the county, cooperation with the Federal and State governments for construction and maintenance of highways in the county, and elimination of the village of shacks that flanks the Columbia pike near Arlington County.

He said, further, that he favored adequate parks, playgrounds and other recreational centers and a sufficient number of paid firemen to protect the county at all times.

Today is the deadline for the payment of the poll tax which will enable voters to participate in the August primary and the November election.

Charles T. Jesse, county treasurer, revealed yesterday that of the 12,000 persons on the voting list, 8,500 have paid their poll tax. In order that the other 3,500 will have a chance to pay, Jesse will keep his office in the courthouse open from 8 o'clock this morning to a late hour tonight.

Arlington County Post of the American Legion will hold its last welfare dance tonight in Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. Music will be provided by David McWilliams' orchestra.

The committee in charge is composed of H. J. Odenthal, chairman; Stuart Thompson, Edgar Pumphrey, Joseph Vermillion, Charles Richey, Noland D. Mitchell, John Maycock, Herbert Hudson and Easton Fox through importation of Russian oils and metals, it was explained, the ground work for which was laid in the Franco-Russian trade treaty in effect for the last two years. An official loan to Russia will not be made, officials asserted, but regular commercial exchanges will handle the financing.

France Will Help Build Red Defense

To Plan for Defense.

Apparently well founded reports here said the French and Russian general staffs, equally alarmed at Germany's rapid re-armament, would work out joint defense plans within the next few months.

Despite the stout insistence of the French all during the process of negotiating the treaty that it was not aimed at any one nation, an indirect warning to Adolf Hitler was contained in the protocol of signatures.

This was the statement that "circumstances have not hitherto permitted conclusion" of the agreements involving Germany and the assertion that the undertakings of the Franco-Soviet pact "should be understood to come into play only within the limits contemplated in the tripartite agreement. * * *"

The proposed three-power agreement would pledge France, Germany and Russia "to come to the assistance of any one of them subjected to aggression on the part of one of those three states.

Keep U. S. Rule, McKellar Plea To Philippines

Islands Not Ready for Other Forms of Government, Senator Maintains.

By the Associated Press.

Filipinos were urged to ask Congress to take back American sovereignty over the Philippines yesterday by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee.

In a surprise minority report to the Senate on the territorial subcommittee's investigation in the islands he criticized the Tydings-McDuffie act granting independence under a 10-year plan as "economically disastrous and ruinous" to the Philippines and to the United States alike.

McKellar urged this Nation get out of the islands immediately if the Filipinos persist in their independence demands.

His report was the first submitted from the committee members who visited the islands last fall.

McKellar advised the Filipinos to ask Congress for amendments to the Tydings act to leave sovereignty in control of the United States; to abandon all attempts to control foreign relations, army, navy and air affairs, and tariff and immigration.

He recommended a supreme court consisting of Americans and Filipinos and the placing of restrictions on the new government's grants of public property and franchises and its issues of bonds.

"Our Filipino friends," said McKellar, "have everything to make them free, independent, prosperous and happy, still they are not satisfied. Apparently they are unable to stand the prosperity which is now theirs in so large and generous a measure."

He said the Filipinos "confessedly are not ready for a democratic or a republican form of government."

Judge Denies Plea for Ruling Freeing Beard

Witness Identifies Alleged Assistant at Trial on Gaming Charge.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

Justice Joseph W. Cox, sitting in District Criminal Court, late yesterday refused to direct a jury of seven men and four women to return a verdict acquitting Sam Beard, accused sultan of Washington's gambling kingdom, and his 12 co-defendants.

As rain pattered against the courthouse windows, the soft-spoken jurist ruled against Defense Attorney John Sirica and his associates, Martin O'Donoghue, jr., and Maurice McInnery, after they had presented vigorous arguments against the District's evidence.

Objections—sustained and overruled—bounced around the courtroom like tennis balls for more than two hours as the defense, led by Sirica, directed its plea for acquittal at Justice Cox for more than two hours.

Sirica, who led the move in behalf of Beard and the 12 others charged with setting up a gaming table, providing a place where a gaming table was set up, and conspiring to violate the gaming laws, insisted that no evidence presented by the District had definitely linked his clients with gambling activities in the Mather Building suite, which was raided last October 5.

"Not once," declared Sirica, "has the prosecution proved that any one of these defendants took a bet or conducted a betting or gambling business on these premises."

As he heard himself described as one in no way implicated with receiving or taking wagers, but merely as the possible dispenser of racing information, Beard sat quietly in his chair, his sturdy legs crossed. A white handkerchief with a blue dotted border protruded neatly from his coat pocket.

The defense scored the wire-tapping methods used by officers in trapping Beard.

A few minutes before the defense began its attack on the prosecution's evidence, the District completed its case against Beard. The final witness brought to the stand by Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Roger Robb was Allen Baker, attached to the Metropolitan Police. Baker merely confirmed some affidavits.

Early yesterday afternoon the Government was forced to impeach two of its own witnesses.

They were William L. Roberts, a paper salesman, and Woodrow Bishop, a delivery boy for a paper company. Both failed to recall from the witness stand certain details of sales of papers to Beard, previously sworn to.

Robb immediately pleaded "surprise," and demanded the right to cross-examine the pair. In his affidavit, Roberts had said he sold scratch pads of a size not ordinarily carried in stock and a case of adding machine rolls to Beard about three years ago.

In his affidavit, given the District Attorney, the delivery boy said that on several occasions he made deliveries to a man he later identified as Frank H. Heck, one of the defendants.

Earlier in the day Sirica cross-examined Detective Sergt. George Deyoe, of the vice squad, in an effort to show, through police charges and grand jury action, the places raided, along with the Mather Building suite, were not in possession of, or being operated by any of the defendants.

Sergt. Deyoe had testified that William A. Garner, at present serving a nine months' sentence on a gambling charge in the District jail, had told him he was obtaining his racing information and passing on his bets to Sam Beard.

Sirica, at this point, turned to an attendant in the packed courtroom.

"Bring Mr. Garner in," he said curtly.

Like a ghost from behind the grim walls of the jail, Garner was escorted into the court. The prisoner was guided before the witness stand, where he and Sergt. Deyoe stared at each other.

"Is this the man you said worked for Sam Beard?" asked Sirica.

"There stands the man who said he gave his bets to Sam Beard," replied Sergt. Deyoe.

P.-T.A. Pledged To Save Youths From Criminals

National Congress Starts Campaign in Closing Hours at Miami.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., May 3.—A relentless fight to save America's youth from crime was pledged today by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in the closing hours of its thirty-ninth annual convention here.

"We view with concern," said the congress by resolution, "the mounting record of crime among boys and girls in increasingly lower age-levels. The home is the basic institution for development of good social attitudes and conduct."

The resolution was adopted, 86 to 58, after Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, of Winnetka, Ill., national president, left the presiding officer's chair and pleaded as a delegate for progressive action.

The congress asked legislation to bar children from all forms of gambling and urged parents to recognize "the harm that comes to children from toys and playthings that incite to war and crime, and to the emulation of gangsters."

Terming the home the foundation for the child's spiritual and cultural growth, the parent-teacher assembly urged parents to "create a wholesome atmosphere in the home by example and attitudes toward the church and other spiritual agencies."

Use of educational motion pictures was indorsed.

The congress declared "the security and the very existence of this and other nations depend upon a peaceful method of settling international disputes."

Other resolutions called for adequate support of Federal research bureaus; Federal aid for education; educational opportunity for all; increased use of radio; adoption of the standard drivers' license law; study of group plans for medical and dental care; better understanding of youth problems, and development of cultural activities for the new leisure time.

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the eleventh thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Friday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

The doctor's eyes gazed around the comfortable room—at the flowers, the fire, the books, the piano. From the room next door came the sound of children's voices. They were romping, laughing—too young to understand that death had taken their father. What would happen to them if the insurance company did not pay Ted's policies? Would they romp and laugh in an orphan asylum or in a day nursery—while their mother worked?

"There's nothing the matter, Celia. I just came back here to write a letter. I want to tell the insurance company that Ted's death was perfectly natural. You see," he forced a laugh. "I'm not as clever a physician as I thought I was."

Celia didn't answer. She was listening to the voices of her children. They were saying their prayers. They were saying, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Jury Dismissed After Deadlock In P. R. R. Case

Unable to Agree on Charge of Favoritism in 26 Hours of Deliberation.

After deliberating 26 hours without reaching an agreement, a jury trying the Pennsylvania Railroad on a charge of granting preferences to four merchants in the produce market at Twelfth and Water streets southwest, was discharged by Justice Jessie C. Adkins in the District Supreme Court late yesterday.

The corporation was alleged to have violated the Elkins act, which expressly forbids the granting or giving of concessions to shippers. It was indicated last year, there being 20 counts, on each of which the maximum fine was $20,000.

On behalf of the Pennsylvania, the law firm of McKenney, Flannery & Craighill contended the road was faced with the prospect of ejecting hard-pressed produce dealers, who faced utter ruination or permitting them to remain in their stalls. The defense said that the rent was still collectible.

The jury was locked up for the night (Thursday), and, when it failed to reach a decision at 3 o'clock yesterday, was ordered dismissed. Harry L. Underwood, assistant United States attorney, in charge of the prosecution, said he would try the case next month.

Five Boys Vie In Scholarship Finals Today

Social SciencesEmphasized for Competing Candidates Taking Tests.

The third campus finals of the Second Washington Post Scholarship Competition takes place this morning at the School of Foreign Affairs of Georgetown University, with five boys, who have triumphed over hundreds in preliminaries, contending for the coveted prize of four years' full tuition in Georgetown's foreign service or business administration course.

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the Foreign Service School, is chairman of a committee of faculty members who will select the winner through oral and written examinations between 9 o'clock and noon. In the tests, which will cover general college entrance subjects, special emphasis will be placed upon the social sciences. Each contestant will be required to satisfy the jury of his grasp of the civic problem treated in the essay which won him a place in the finals.

The finalists, all of whom are honor students, are Sidney Carver, Fredericksburg, Va., High School; Ray D. Riley, Emmitsburg, Md., High School, and, from Washington, Sylvan Floam, of McKinley High School; Samuel Temin, of Eastern, and Carl Francis Garges, St. John's College High School.

Takes Champions' Place.

The youngest of this group, Temin, of Eastern, is perhaps the happiest and most hopeful. In his school's finals early in March he just missed one of the three division championships, which carry final chances on the campuses. Last week one of these three champions, Gordon Girling, was forced through illness to withdraw. Charles Hart, principal, promptly nominated Temin as his alternate and after several days' deliberation upon the scholarships offered, the new candidate cast his lot for the Georgetown prize.

An honor student in all of his studies, Temin is undecided on the choice he would make between the business administration and foreign service courses, should be capture the award.

"Both of these courses appeal to me strongly," he told contest officials yesterday. "My essay topic, 'Can Capitalism Solve the Unemployment Problem?' more or less dovetails problems that interest me greatly and that are covered in these two courses at the Foreign Service School."

Temin is also greatly interested in chemistry, having spent spare hours as chemical laboratory assistant since completing a first and second year course in this subject. He is also president of the debating club and on the varsity team booked for major debates. He was vice president during the past term of the school's history club and played an important role in the spring play. He is but 15 and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Temin, of 1501 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. His sister, Annette Temin, representing Eastern last year, won second place in the American University finals of the the first Post scholarship competition.

Attends Night School.

Floam, whose essay covers "Pros and Cons of Hitlerism in Germany," was graduated from McKinley in February, with third rank in a class of 192. He is now attending night school there on postgraduate work. He is especially talented in civics and mathematics and was a members of McKinley's philatelic society and patrol and a reporter and feature writer for Tech Life. He is 17, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Floam, of 205 G street northwest.

Garges, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Garges, of 3414 Quesada street northwest, is a lieutenant in St. John's Cadet Corps. He stands high on the school's honor roll and is especially talented in civil government and English classes. His ambitions are divided between a legal and a business administration career. His essay is on "Economic Arguments in Relation to the Housing and Slum Problems."

Carver, who is 17 and the son of Horace Carver, 115 Hawke street, Fredericksburg, Va., has already decided upon the business administration course, should he win today. He is another honor roll student, and a member of his school's scholarship club. His favorite studies cover history, science and mathematics. His essay is on "The Naval Limitation Problem."

Active in Dramatics.

Riley, whose essay treats of "Causes and Cures of the Agricultural Problem," wants the business course with emphasis on the commercial aspects of agriculture. He is active in the Emmitsburg High School's Dramatic Club, Athletic Association and Future Farmers of America Club. He is 16, and the son of Norman E. Riley, of Emmitsburg.

Chester Davis and William Waldo, winners of first and second scholarships at the foreign service school in last year's Post competition, and now members of the freshman class, will assist in an entertainment program in honor of the finalists. This will include a luncheon at the National Press Club and a sightseeing tour through Washington and nearby Virginia, terminating at The Washington Post, where staff members will greet the group and conduct them through the plant, and where the winner will be announced.

The last of The Post finals will be held at the Catholic University of America next Saturday to select the winner of a full tuition scholarship in that institution's school of engineering or college of arts and sciences.

Murder Jury Frees Weinelt In 16 Minutes

Housekeeper's Testimony Deciding Factor in Matt Case.

After deliberating only 16 minutes, a Prince Georges County circuit court jury yesterday declared Frank Weinelt, Cedarville, Md., farmer, not guilty in the slaying of August Matt, a neighbor, last Christmas Eve.

The jury retired at 2:05 p. m. after listening to State's Attorney Alan Bowie and his assistant, Frank Hall, plead for conviction.

Weinelt was defended by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, J. Wilson Ryon and T. Van Clagett, jr. Throughout the trial he denied any knowledge of the murder.

The State's case crumbled Friday when its star witness, Mrs. Mita Brodhaute, housekeeper of the slain man, testified it was not Weinelt's light delivery truck she saw under her window the night Matt was called to the front door to be killed with a shotgun.

She further testified a man whom she saw in the darkness near the auto was too short to have been Weinelt. The defendent is 5 feet 11 inches tall.

The testimony of Leo Weinelt, 19, a son of the defendant, that his father left home for a few minutes about the time of the murder and on his return told him to take a wheel off the truck and tell no one he had been out, was controverted by defense attorneys.

Friday night they introduced the other two sons, Raymond, 10, and Howard, 7, who denied hearing their father give Leo any such orders. They said their father told them if they wanted to go to midnight mass they would have to fix a leak in one tire.

Defense attorneys also broke down evidence presented by the State that Weinelt's truck was seen one-fourth of a mile from the scene about the time of the murder.

They presented witnesses who said that a truck similar in almost every detail to Weinelt's was owned by a Cheltenham store and had passed the designated spot at the time mentioned.

Weinelt, who came over from Germany in 1911, appeared elated at the decision. He had shown little emotion throughout the trial.

Marie McKeever Trial Is Speeded

To Be Taken to Baltimore Next Week, Flynn Hears.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 3.—Marie McKeever, under indictment here on a charge of concealing and possessing automatic rifles and pistols stolen from the Government, will be brought from Philadelphia next week, according to information received today by Bernard J. Flynn, United States district attorney.

She was arrested here last summer when Robert Mais and William Davis, leaders of the "Tri-State Gang," were captured in a gun battle. After being held for a month she was released, but later rearrested with Mais and Walter Legenza, who had shot their way out of the Richmond jail while awaiting execution for the murder of a mail-truck driver during a holdup. Mais and Legenza later were electrocuted.

The indictment, returned January 31, charges the McKeever woman with assisting Mais and Legenza in the concealment of two automatic rifles and four pistols stolen from the Maryland National Guard Armory at Hyattsville.

Bremer Kidnaping Related in Court

Barker and Karpis Accused Again by Prisoner.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—For the second time in two days, Arthur (Doc) Barker and his hunted comrade, Alvin Karpis, were accused by a former associate of participating in the $200,000 abduction of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker.

Barker and nine codefendants are on trial here for conspiracy to kidnap Bremer.

A statement signed by Elmer Farmer, Bensenville (Ill.) tavern keeper, relating the parts played by the two leaders and five others, was read to the jury, which had heard a similar recital signed by Harold Alderton, in whose Bensenville home Bremer was held 21 days.

Early this afternoon, as a packed courtroom waited in anticipation Bolton would be called to relate a complete "inside" story of the abduction, Federal Judge M. M. Joyce announced adjournment until Monday.

Jews Started War, Nazi Expert Says

Witness Contradicts Self Later at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Berne, Switzerland, May 3.—Nazi efforts to prove Jews guilty of plotting secretly to dominate the world culminated today in an expert's charge that Jews were responsible for the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria at Sarajevo in 1914.

Shortly afterward, however, the Nazi witness, Ulrich Fleischauer, apparently contradicted himself with an assertion that the notorious protocols of Zion, focal point of the trial of Swiss Nazis charged with slander here, "do not incite to crime."

Fleischauer, completing his testimony, launched accusations against Jewry ranging all the way from supporting the crime that touched off the World War to gaining the control of the League of Nations to further their program of world domination.

Five Accused In $129,000 Mail Robbery

New England Crime Leaders Named Before Grand Jury by U.S. Agent.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 3.—Carl Rettich, who presided over an elaborate criminal stronghold at Warwick, R. I., which was raided a week ago, and five other men were named today by Postal Inspector John J. Breslin as the bandits who last January robbed a postal truck in Fall River of $129,000. All are under arrest, except one who was "bumped off" last Friday.

Breslin, chief inspector for the New England district, made this assertion as he and other Federal investigators went before a special session of the grand jury here to demand indictments.

The others named by Breslin were:

Joseph Fisher, described by United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford as Rhode Island's "Public Enemy, No. 1." He is held in the Providence, R. I., County Jail.

Held Without Bail.

Thomas Dugan, alias Lee, Moran and Frank Thomas, who is held without bail at New York charged with two slayings and robbery.

Charles Harrigan, alias McCarthy and Jack Gallo, under arrest at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, suffering from bullet wounds, also charged with two slayings and robbery and held without bail.

John "Sonny" McGlone, held without bail yesterday at New York after Police Capt. Daniel Curtayne told United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter: "This fellow is the trigger man of that Fall River mob, according to the Government men." Turning to McGlone, Curtayne said: "I'm telling you, you'll burn when they get you up there."

Sixth Man Slain.

The sixth man named by Breslin was Andino Merola, jr., Providence gangster, but the underworld has removed Merola from Breslin's jurisdiction. His bullet-pierced body was found in Wrentham a week ago tonight.

Rettich remained carefully guarded in a Rhode Island cell for the dual purpose of preventing escape and shielding him from five gunmen who were imported from New York, Federal investigations said, to assassinate him.

No Wonder He Died, Doctor, No Wonder!

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City May 3.—Trancript of proceedings in a damage suit today:

Lawyer: "Doctor, in popular language, please tell the jury the cause of the patient's death."

Doctor: "In plain language, he died of an oedema of the brain that followed a cerebral thrombosis or possibly embolism that followed. In turn, arteriosclerosis combined with the effects of gangrenous cystitis——"

A juror: "Well, I'll be damned!"

The judge: "Ordinarily I would fine a juror for saying anything like that, but I can't in this instance because the court was thinking the same thing."

Marvin A. Gardner, well-known young bass-barytone, of Washington, has won a vocal scholarship at the Curtis Institute of Music, the award having been made after an audition in Philadelphia last Wednesday. Mr. Gardner has been active in local musical circles for several years. He has appeared in leading roles in a number of amateur operatic productions, and has attained recognition as a popular radio singer.

Court Enjoins Stock Selling On SEC Plea

Howard M. Roberts and 3 Associates Accused of Fraud Scheme.

Acting on the complaint of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Justice James M. Proctor in the District Supreme Court yesterday signed an order requiring Howard M. Roberts, trading as Howard M. Roberts Co., of Baltimore, and three employes, W. C. Whitlock, B. T. Betchol and Charles C. Willson, to show cause May 13 why they should not be enjoined from continuing a stock sale.

According to the commission's complaint, Roberts and his associates have been dealing in the stock of the Television & Electric Corporation, which they purchased at from 50 to 60 cents a share and which they sold, allegedly, for $2 a share.

The commission alleged the firm had been stopped from doing business in Baltimore when the Maryland attorney general obtained a "cease and desist" order. The bill said that since then, Washington has been selected as a field of campaign. The stock concern's sales program was described as being a "scheme and artifice to defraud in that it purported to sell with the stock a financial advisory service."

John J. Burns and Paul Y. Waters filed the commission suit.

Senator Proposes Beltsville Inquiry

Would Bare Connection With Sheets Dismissal.

Although the Federal Government apparently has completed its investigation of the use of PWA funds in developing an experimental station for the Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Md., a Senate inquiry was asked yesterday.

Senator Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, offered a resolution calling for a Senate investigation of the expenditures and the dismissal of Dr. E. W. Sheets as head of the division of animal industry of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry.

Dr. Sheets, who was transferred to Florida following the first investigation by the PWA, was notified last week that he must resign effective May 15, although he has been in the department since 1918.

Senator Carey said he wanted to determine what connection there is between the dismissal of Sheets and the Beltsville investigation.

It was not determined immediately whether the resolution should be referred to the Appropriations or Agricultural Committee.

An Ominous Portent.

Official reactions to the Sakdalista uprising in the Philippines vary greatly. Manuel Quezon thinks the outbreak "doesn't amount to anything" and that it will be "entirely forgotten in a week or so." Governor General Murphy regards the extremists who brought about this clash as less of a problem than the communists in some American cities. But Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner in Washington, fears that the riots may "even jeopardize the life of the Philippines Commonwealth." Constabulary officials consider the situation "very grave."

Somewhere among these viewpoints lies the truth. The Philippines have had insurrections before without disastrous consequences. The party which sponsored this movement is relatively small and has no effective leadership. Apparently the constabulary is easily capable of subduing the malcontents and restoring order.

On the other hand, the circumstances surrounding this insurrection are unique in the history of the Philippines. Radicals in the agrarian districts of Luzon are conducting a bitter campaign against adoption of the constitution under which the islands will begin their final transition to complete independence. Thoughtful observers, including The Post's Manila correspondent, Mr. Vincente Albano Pacis, note a deep pessimism among the Filipinos regarding this long-desired event. They fear the economic consequences of separation from the United States.

Over a long period Filipino politicians have taught the people to regard independence as a glorious objective. Its economic results have been inadequately considered. Confronted now by lower incomes, higher taxes and widespread reorganization of their industrial system, the Filipinos are in a perturbed state of mind. Of course, they are still eager for independence. But as the event draws nearer opinions as to its desirability become less academic and more embittered. Between opposing factions there is now more likelihood of armed conflict.

Some groups are especially resentful because the leaders who are now urging adoption of the new constitution warned them only a short time ago that independence under the conditions laid down by Congress would bring ruin to the islands. When leaders are not frank with the people suspicions are certain to arise.

It may be significant, too, that the Sakdal Party leader is reported to be in Japan on a "mission." Unless a strong government can be maintained at Manila, there will be a strong temptation for dissatisfied groups to seek foreign aid in overturning every unpopular regime. There is no reason to suppose that the present disturbances have been in any way promoted from outside Philippine territory. But it is only to be expected that the fishing expeditions organized for these troubled waters will not always be of purely domestic origin.

Heavy Responsibility.

In fact, we are worrying about it day and night. I never hear the telephone ring at night, but what I feel it has happened, and I think I can say it truthfully of every other operator who is held responsible for his ships coming in and out.

A famous flier, Capt. Rickenbacker, was speaking before the House sub-committee investigating airport sites for the District. His sense of impending tragedy arises from the hazardous conditions under which the Washington Airport is at present operated. His testimony was supplemented by similar statements from many witnesses. For example, Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, added this to the picture:

We have had a number of close calls at Washington Airport because of the Military road. That is not simply a story that somebody reported. It actually has happened. I have seen it myself and I have been in planes that have had close calls, and it would be bad business not to do something about it while waiting several years for the development of another airport. It could happen most any day with 14 passengers in an airplane. I am sure that there should be a feeling of responsibility about any program.

Yet Senator King has concluded that Congress should ignore the problem thus raised for a few more years. His announcement probably closes the door to any airport legislation at this session of Congress. Members of that body have been unable to decide upon a site for the proposed municipal air terminal. Consequently the existing menace is to be ignored. It will be difficult for a Senator who has manifested as much interest in District affairs as has Mr. King to justify that attitude.

The local government has acquired a number of extraordinary obligations in recent months. If the District must share the cost of an airport on an equal basis the financing will be a problem. But that does not excuse official apathy toward a recognized menace to life. If this hazard could be removed, even temporarily, the airport tangle might work itself out satisfactorily in a few years. But delay in emergency adjustments places a heavy responsibility upon Congress for any tragedy that may occur on the present inadequate landing field.

A Bungling Attack.

The United States Chamber of Commerce represents the business interests of the country. In that capacity its simple duty is to explain and expound the views of its members on questions of public policy that vitally concern them. The task can easily be bungled by those who substitute sweeping condemnation of policies they disapprove for discriminating and constructive criticism.

Any examination of the resolutions passed by the chamber at its current session shows very clearly that upon this occasion the inexpert method of procedure has been preferred to conciliatory expressions of opinion that might have been helpful without being either weak or evasive.

Instead of realizing, for instance, that passage of social insurance legislation is virtually assured, and contenting itself with recommendations for easing the burden of the insurance levies, the Chamber of Commerce challenges the "propriety as well as the constitutionality of any effort by the Federal Government designed to take jurisdiction over the subject matter of this proposed legislation." The result is that the chamber's general indorsement of social security legislation appears to be mere lip service, if not actually insincere.

Another illustration of inexpertness is afforded by a resolution concerning the NRA. Having urged that the present law be permitted to expire in June, the chamber asks for substitute temporary legislation that would greatly increase the privileges of organized industries operating under voluntary codes. At the same time, it condemns collective bargaining arrangements which would give similar preferential position to organized labor. This disposition to ask for more power and at the same time to express disapproval of all policies that entail sacrifices for business, creates a most unfavorable impression. It tends, of course, to weaken the force of justified criticism of such legislative proposals as Section II of the banking act, and the public utilities bill, which in its present form would destroy utility holding companies.

The significant silence of the Chamber of Commerce on the subject of the works-relief program, its advocacy of subsidies to merchant vessels and its plea for Federal regulation of all forms of interstate commerce show that the business men of the country are far from averse to benefiting from certain forms of Government aid. They can not expect, therefore, to get away with an attitude which condemns all Government intervention that offers no direct tangible benefits to business.

The hostile attitude of the delegates toward Administration policies is reported to have "shocked" the head of the United States Chamber of Commerce in London. He pointed out that British business had cooperated with the Government and had willingly undertaken sacrifices to speed recovery. He predicted that if American business fails to do likewise, it would "get something worse." Certainly an organization which undertakes to act as spokesman for any class, and to defend its interests against any infringement, must be prepared to make reasonable concessions to the claims of other groups.

The reactionary attitude is never "good business," especially when it leads to attacks upon measures and policies that are almost certain to be indorsed by the people as a whole. The views of the Chamber of Commerce as expressed in its resolutions would have carried more weight, and might have had a salutary effect upon pending legislation, if they had been more discriminating, more objective and more tempered by intelligent understanding of the times in which we live.

Invidious Comparisons.

Apologists for our heavy Federal spending program frequently call attention to the indisputable fact that the British pay higher taxes per capita than do Americans. An unusual variant on this comparison was provided when Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas, reminded the delegates to the meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce that per-capita governmental expenditures are 16 per cent higher in this country than in Great Britain.

Mr. Allen's conclusion that all of this spending comes from some form of taxation is subject to certain reservations, since the rapid rise in the expenditures of the Federal Government is as yet financed by lavish borrowing. Taxes will be required to meet the interest on such loans and to provide for their gradual retirement. So there is no knowing how our per-capita tax burden will stand in relation to that of the British a few years hence.

It is evident, however, that the spread between the British and American tax burdens is narrowing at the present time, since unbalanced budgets tend to add to our debt charges, while the British have succeeded in balancing their budget and have even effected some reduction in taxes. Except to call attention to these divergent trends, the per-capita tax and expenditure estimates have slight value as a measure of the relative burden represented by governmental collections. That depends upon various factors, particularly the amount and distribution of the national income.

The volume of private indebtedness also influences the tax-paying ability of a people. In that respect the American people are handicapped in comparison with the British, since the per-capita load of insurance, mortgage and other obligations in the United States is extremely heavy. International tax comparisons, in short, are not only invidious but may easily lead to false conclusions when used to test the taxable capacity of a nation.

At Churchill Downs.

A careful study is made of pedigrees. Relationships for generations back are checked and re-checked. And, a decision having been made, a colt is foaled. Gawky and stilt-legged, some part of his honorable heritage can be seen smoldering deep down in his wistful eyes.

The summer sun shines down on the little horse as he trails beside his mother in the white-fenced pastures. The phosphorus and calcium of the bluegrass and clear water build up solid bone, strong tendons and elastic muscles. Slowly the angles of his frame fill out until, by the time he is a yearling, his coat has developed into a satiny sheen and every line of his head and neck, shoulders, legs and body proclaim his noble lineage. Then begins the schooling. First he learns of the saddle, then come the bridle and halter shank. Hour after hour, the lessons go on. Patience and tact are needed to readjust the sensitive spirit to the discipline of strap and bit. No whip is used; one does not whip royalty.

Toward the end of his second summer his apprenticeship begins: he is taken to a race track. The stable boy on his back looks for every sign as he pounds curiously down the springy course. Is the hopeful a natural, a demon or a problem? Slowly his first term is served out. When the second year rolls around he starts a daily 5-mile stint, running mostly against time. First the eighth and then the quarter. After each session there is a half hour of cooling down, followed by a hot liniment wash and a soothing massage. His masters look on carefully. Can he go the route? Will he flinch from steel? Will he welcome the whip? He must be taught before he enters the 2-year-old stakes. It is there he tastes of starting stalls and crowds and bands and radio megaphones. Thus the second term is finished.

And today, a 3-year-old, he is at Churchill Downs. He stands at last on the threshold of his destiny. Beckoning him on are those who have run before him since 1875—Aristides, Vagrant, Day Star, Lord Murphy, Hindoo, Proctor Knott, Ben Brush, Old Rosebud and the rest. His owner, trainer, jockey and handlers form a careful cordon around his stall. Outside a carefree throng is milling toward the spired grandstand. From all the corners of the land they have traveled for this one day. Flags swim in the sun-filled air; a smell of mustard and perfume rises from the dust; a happy tenseness sweeps the hearts of all; and there are gay dresses, frosted juleps, clacking mutuel machines, shouts and murmurs.

The bugle sounds. The dainty pirouette before the gala stands. The starter's calm! The flag—they're off! The stark tattoo, the quarter is passed and then the mile! The turn—the gulping drive—the last few frenzied lunges to the wire—and the sixty-first Kentucky Derby winner turns for the acclaim of the multitudes.

To Aid The Living.

A basic responsibility of any art museum, says Mr. C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery, is to aid the living artist and to encourage contemporary art.

The occasion for emphasizing this undeniable, but often neglected, social obligation was the presentation by the board of the Corcoran Gallery of two prizes, one for an oil painting and one for a water color, to the Committee of the Independent Art Exhibition now being held in nine of Washington's department stores. Instead of electing the prize winners themselves, the Corcoran trustees selected artists who had already won distinction in the exhibition as a committee to choose the recipients of the Corcoran awards. In other words, they were willing to trust the artists sufficiently to allow them the privilege of bestowing the honors bearing the name of the local gallery.

Such interest and confidence in the contemporary artist, and such generous cooperation with a popular civic movement, are only too rare among museum trustees and directors. Washingtonians, and especially the artists of Washington, may consider themselves fortunate in having so alert and progressive a group of citizens at the head of the Corcoran Gallery.

A doctor has a discouraging business. When a customer comes in it's the doctor's duty to try to serve him so well that a repeat order will not be forthcoming.

If the moths get in our clothes this year they'll have to do it at night.

The Check Writers of Washington.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Washington dispatch estimates that it will require a thousand extra men to write the checks that will go to those benefiting under the $4,000,000,000 works program. More men will also be needed by the Bureau of Engraving to print the blank checks.

As long as the supply of paper and ink holds out all will be well, but some day the question of what to use for money will arise and then we shall have a problem on our hands that will make all the previous problems seem insignificant by comparison.

"The Lynching Business."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most important bill before Congress now is the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill. I say it is the most important because the present continued injustice to our colored population breeds class hatreds that might endanger our national existence in time of war.

The normal relationship between the whites and colored should at least be friendly for the interests of both. Southern planters profit by Negro labor to the extent of millions of dollars. In the North, the Negro has proved himself to be a man of honor and ability. He is able to respond fully to the opportunities and responsibilities put upon him. To deny him his rights and a chance to advance his economic position is to make a criminal of him and endanger the peace of the whole Nation to say nothing of the glaring injustice.

Abe Lincoln said: "We can not endure as a Nation one-half free and one-half slave." Let me add that we can not endure and prosper as a Nation when one-half of the States nullify the Constitution for a large part of their peaceful citizens.

The worst part about the whole lynching business is that it creates a disrespect for all law and order. If mobs of people can disregard with impunity one article of the Constitution, why not any one? Lynching is a damning admission of a whole State and its citizens that they regard the law as a joke or of no importance.

Law is something built up through the ages and is built upon justice. The ideas of justice are a slow growth, an accretion of centuries and presupposes a theory of progress. If we discard the theory of progress and gradual improvement of the relations of mankind, we might just as well shut up shop and haul down the American flag. If the Stars and Stripes do not stand for equal and real justice for all citizens, rich and poor, black, white, red or any other color, it does not mean anything at all.

Assaults On Character.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Never before in this country has the mass of people been so inflamed against persons of wealth and business and the inciting cause is the present Administration. It has used every device to stir up the people and to direct its wrath against the very persons who have created this luxurious American life. The press agents and spokesmen of the Administration keep up a continuous barrage of epithets and slogans against everyone who is not under Government wardship.

The Andrew Mellon episode is but one of a long series of persecutions against the real American benefactors. This man's life has been made up of hard work, great responsibility and public service and only a heartless bureaucratic machine would dare point an accusing finger at him. It passes all meanness to trump up technical charges against such a noble American and if the public were not so thoroughly indoctrinated with bureaucratic bunk, they would see through the whole sham.

Unless this campaign is counteracted by suitable methods, we are soon going to reach a Soviet state of mind. It behooves every real American who loves his country to look through and beyond all this bureaucratic bunk. Assaults upon character and honor ought not be permitted.

District Teachers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past several months I have been observing the procedure in the junior and senior high schools of the District of Columbia. One fact stands out so clearly that it should be called to the attention of all those interested in education and this should, of course, include everyone. A school is no better than its principal and teachers. Good equipment helps, but without good teaching it loses any functional value.

There are two fundamental reasons for indifferent teaching. The first is that so many teachers are merely making a living. They do not consider it a privilege to be instructing young people. They have opportunities to mold character and they treat their opportunities on a bread-and-butter basis. Many lessons are not planned; they "just grow." A teacher who is not interested should try another profession.

On the other hand, a teacher who is forced to teach seven or eight classes a day naturally finds it difficult to keep his enthusiasm at a high pitch. The second reason for indifferent teaching lies, therefore, with the legislators who have placed an impossible burden on the schools by their short-sighted economy.

The fact still remains that a weeding out of inefficient teachers is necessary. I found one teacher who did everything but whip a boy into understanding fractions. I found one who is obviously a nervous wreck. I found several who simply didn't know their subjects, or if they did they made a great mystery of them.

To be sure, most of the teachers are doing splendid work in the face of tremendous odds, but the weak teachers must be weeded out, for they leave scars that are often never erased. CITIZEN.

Inconsistent Patriots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have certainly done a good service not only to the "Daughters of 1812," but to all similar organizations claiming some hereditary connection with the early fathers or mothers of the American Nation in your recent editorial entitled "Somewhat Contradictory."

If the leaders in these groups will face frankly the challenging question thus asked by you, namely, why they are "so dubious of the ability of democratic principles to triumph over alien teachings" they may gain some slight vision of their twisted and unwarranted mental processes. Maybe the restatement of the almost self-evident fact that "suppression of free speech is a denial of the most fundamental American rights" will help these flag-waving monitors of fancied "Americanism" to see the absurd inconsistency of their attitude. An Udder Question.

The governors of seven States have petitioned the Federal Government to step in and regulate milk. Everything else can be planned; why not milk? All the Federal Government has to do is to say just how much production shall be, or just what prices shall be, or both.

It is a pleasant theory, and those who hold it are apparently unruffled by the questionable results from other planning operations. But it may encounter one peculiar difficulty. This is owing to the fact that milk comes from cows. Much may be said in favor of the cow, but she is regrettably no planner. Nature designed her to bring forth her young in the spring; she supplies milk copiously at that time; and then becomes more niggardly. Try as we do to get her to change her habits, she still gives apallingly more in June than in January. In order that city people may have enough milk in January, they have to get too much (for the producers, at all events) in June. Milk spoils. Surpluses tend to become chronic. From the standpoint of the planner, this is rugged individualism gone mad, this is anarchy and chaos, but all this is very hard to explain to a cow.

Lynching and States' Rights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At its meeting on April 30, the interracial committee of the District of Columbia adopted the following minutes:

"That we view with astonishment and profound regret the attitude taken by The Washington Post toward the pending legislation against lynching.

"The argument of The Post that this crime should be left to the States to deal with is self-refuted. Only because it has been left so far to the States and the States have failed to suppress it have men and women sensible of this deep disgrace felt forced to appeal to the Federal power.

"We can not conceive of the editor of The Post as unaware that by his course he is strengthening the hands of the singular beings that in the fourth decade of the twentieth century do not hesitate publicly to assert mob murder as a right, sacred and unassailable. We remind him that 75 years ago the intellectual forerunners of these persons did not hesitate to assert similarly as sacred and unassailable a right of man to own his fellow man. We can not think the editor of The Post has failed to note this strange and sinister analogy.

"Knowledge of the unspeakable horrors of recent lynchings in this country has spread around the world, until mankind marvels that American civilization should lag so far behind the civilization of the Ashantees and the wild Papuans. We are weary of the intolerable stigma of this disgrace. That efforts to remove the foul blot in the only way whereby it can be removed do not seem to appeal to The Post is puzzling but not disheartening. We believe that elsewhere all good citizenship feels as we feel about it."

I was instructed by the meeting to lay this memorandum before you.

Chairman, Interracial Committee, District of Columbia.

Post Office, Saturday.

"JUST what," asks one Column-friend, "did Abyssinia do to insult Italy?"

"Most likely," answers another C. F., "Abyssinia insulted Italy by discovering a lot of oil wells—in Abyssinia."

There's more in that than mere persiflage.

Most Americans have already forgotten the insult originally alleged by Mussolini. Possibly many Italians have already forgotten it. Undoubtedly, many Abyssinians never knew anything about it. But the fact remains that Abyssinia is the one part of Africa worth modern European exploitation which has thus far evaded exploitation. And the fact remains that Abyssinia would make such really excellent plucking as to have caught the covetous eyes of more than a single European power.

There is oil there. There are first rate fields for cotton, too, and tobacco. There are copper, silver, platinum and gold. And there is the Lake Tsana.

In Geneva, and in 1924, we telephoned the Information Section of the League, inquiring:

"What is the cubic content of Lake Tsana?"

"The what of which?" the Section demanded.

We asked: "Isn't this the Information Section?" And, being informed that it was, we patiently explained that we were writing a novelette-masterpiece called "Water for Paradise," that its scene was laid in Abyssinia, and that Tsana's political significance—

"Oh, Abyssinia?" the Section interrupted, "Wait a minute, and I'll look it up. But I don't see what the political significance of Tsana can be."

Our Italian cook could have told him. Said she in Italian-French: "I know the political significance of Lake Tsana. It is chief among the head-waters of the Nile, and whoever diverted them would ruin the English cotton fields of the Sudan."

The French stake in Abyssinia is an exclusive concession for the operation of its railroads. Italy's two colonies in East Africa and Eritrea are separated by Abyssinia, and Mussolini would, not unnaturally, like to connect them by rail.

Thus Britain, France and Italy have each an "interest" in Abyssinia. And thus Abyssinia is nervous about all three of them.

The empire, roughly the size of Texas, has but one link with the outside world and wants no more—that French concession which has as yet blossomed into only a single railroad—the Franco-Ethiopian, wavering to the port of Djibonti across the Samoli Desert, while lions roar protest along the route, baboons groan and frightened fond gazelles scamper to safety.

The polyglot countryfolk—Copts by faith, like all their fellow citizens, members of the second oldest Christian church—use salt bars and cartridges for money. Although the capital city, Addis Ababa (meaning "New Flower") boasts a pair of more or less hotels, lots of electric light, some paving and plumbing, a drug store and a postoffice, the majority of its houses would hardly qualify even as tax earners in 1935 Manhattan.

But the Emperor, Haile Selassie, adds some mighty modern opinions to his ancient powers of absolutism and his Washingtonian desire to keep his people free from entangling foreign alliances. Almost the last of the kings, in the sense in which the word "king" used to be used, and sprung from a family that has reigned since the days of Solomon, he nevertheless wants to blend—slowly, to be sure—the aloofness of his people with so much as seems to him good in foreign civilizations.

Harvard would consider him "educated"; Congress would call him "highbrow." The crush at a White House reception would have to admit that he had superior manners—and he organized a Brain Trust before ever such an instiution was born of President Roosevelt's (or wasn't it really President Hoover's or President Harding's?) brain.

He has about him, says Josef Israels 2d in a recent issue of the New York Times Magazine, "Europeans and Americans expert in mining, engineering and medicine." The emperor sends promising young subjects to study abroad. He has started a school system. What is more to the present purpose, he has long been going in for Preparedness.

* * *

Ethiopia is generally pictured as sadly at the dubious mercy of any invader equipped with aerial, gaseous and long-range war-machinery. But to be effective such an invader would have to go far from his bases. The Abyssinians have, in the past, accounted for a English and an Italian expedition. Before attempting anything too rough, a would-be assimilator of Ethiopia might do well to follow the Pennsylvania-Dutchman's advice:

"When you are goin' to try anysing anywheres, look a leedle out."

Carlisle Bargeron

Dan Comes Through.

EVERYWHERE in Administration circles yesterday they were singing Dan Roper's praises. He was at least what might be called king for a day and there was no reason to believe he might not be king for many days. There was a movement on to get the newspaper boys to refer to him for a period of ten days as "assistant President," "ace man" or "No. 1 boy," the accolades which are bestowed with the freedom of Kentucky colonels on the fellows who do good turns. Tugwell, Ickes, Hopkins, Donald Richberg and Frank Walker have at one time or another enjoyed the honor. Donald has the record for continuous holding of it but Tugwell has won it so many times that it is believed if he wins it once more it will be his for keeps.

Whether Dan gets it for ten days or longer, however, it is considered quite an accomplishment, because he will be the first Democrat so acclaimed, the first one to break through, so to speak, the New Deal ring of steel.

• • • •

As one high Democrat expressed it enthusiastically: "I knew Dan would come through. He's a fellow you can count upon. After all, he's been around here for about 30 years and sooner or later he was bound to turn up with something good."

What Dan did, of course, was to turn up at the White House with a bunch of friendly business men at a time when it looked as though Mr. Roosevelt didn't have a business man friend in the world. There was the Chamber of Commerce over in its citadel on a spree of denunciation. The speakers seemed to try to out-do one another in their diatribes against the New Deal. The impression is that Mr. Roosevelt in the White House must have felt very dejected, indeed. All pretense of him and business getting along fairly nicely together was being thrown to the four winds. Out to the country was going the picture that business and the President had definitely split, not a pretty picture at all. That the Administration was bowing to the inevitable is evidenced by the statement of an unnamed Administration official who was quoted in the newspapers as saying: "Well, we've never had business with us anyway. We look to our support from the common people." Or words to that effect. A very fine alignment to set up, the people versus business.

It was at this juncture that Dan saved the day. Up at the White House he showed with a bunch of business men, who said they were friends of the President, that they believed in what he was doing. And some of them are members of the Chamber of Commerce.

• • • •

Well sir, one imagines Mr. Roosevelt was visibly affected and when the business men left that he called up Dan and asked: "Dan, tell me, where in the name of goodness did you get them from?"

And then the story came out. Dan has been saving them for many months for just such an emergency as this. Months ago he got up his advisory council but no one could tell what he had in mind inasmuch as nobody paid any attention to the advice the advisory council advised. But Dan was patient and like Noah when he built the Ark paid no attention to the scoffers. Some day, Dan knew, the advisory council would come in good.

The council's appearance at the White House didn't offset the chamber's denunciation, of course, but it took some of the fire from it. Right up in the first paragraphs of the stories telling of the chamber's barrage was the softening effect of the business men who like the New Deal, NRA, AAA, security legislation and all.

• • • •

It was one of the most dramatic episodes of the Third Economy. And the result is expected to be that Mr. Roosevelt will let those business men who visited him recover and that the unnamed high Administration official who said it was the people and the President on one hand and business on the other will amend his statement to read that it is the people, the President and this group of business men on one side and the rest of business on the other.

In the meantime, one Democrat who has begrudged Messrs. Ickes, Tugwell, Wallace, Hopkins, et al., running away with the party, observed ruefully: "Dan's coming through that way just goes to prove there are a lot of things we Democrats could do if we were given the opportunity."

Ecuadorean Indians Lift Heads To Assert Positions In Nation

Slow Stirrings Typical Of Trends In All South America.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

RECENT items from the Republic of Ecuador reveal that the Indians of that nation are stirring. Three thousand of them recently went on a rampage against the foremen of the estates on which they worked. This isolated movement in a specific locality is, however, the surface expression of something deeper and more generalized.

Ecuador, like so many other Latin-American nations, is a congeries of geographic zones and of a series of racial layers. The Costa, the Sierra and Region Oriental are the three geographic zones, each representing distinct types of climate, areas of production and of culture. The first, on the coast, as the name Costa implies, is a hot torrid region where the majority of the population are Negroes, mestizos or Indians who have become mestizo in their thinking and habits. The main city and port of this area is Guayaquil, the second largest in Ecuador, a rival politically of Quito and seat of the "white" elite, which lives and labors on this tropical shore of the republic. Until recently vessels passed by this city because of its unhealthy atmosphere. It is now, however, a clean city and a regular port of call for passenger and freight steamers, Chile-bound.

• • • •

THE Sierra is the Andean temperate region. Quito, the political capital of the nation, and its cultural center as well, though sitting almost squarely on the equator, is one of America's coolest cities because of its altitude, being many thousands of feet above sea level. Here the majority of the peoples are Quechuan-speaking Indians, descendants and heirs of the Incas and of Inca culture. Here also is the city of Cuenca, the third largest city of Ecuador though still unconnected either with the capital or with Guayaquil by railroad.

Over on the east lies the Oriental Region. This is Ecuador's Amazonia, much of which is in dispute with Brazil, Peru and Colombia, and where live the primitive nomad Indians of the tropical forests. Their influence in national life is almost negligible and their life, just now, is interesting mainly to ethnologists and anthropologists.

Just as Ecuador is broken up into climatic and production zones, so is its population. And the development of racial homogeneity is one of Ecuador's main problems, a problem which is not facilitated by certain historical and social facts which are discussed by Espinosa Tamayo in a penetrating volume published posthumously, the "Psychology and Sociology of the Ecuadorian People," and by Moises Saenz in a rather recent study on the Ecuadorian Indian. According to both of these writers large landed-estatism is still responsible for the condition of the Indian.

TAMAYO asserts that in the early days of the republic five or six aristocratic creole families controlled al lof Ecuador. They owned most of the land, most of such industries as existed, and dominated huge sections of the population by family ties, by wage ties, by debt ties and by other devices which made the many dependent on the few for their very livelihood.

Two years ago Moises Saenz, former Undersecretary of Education in Mexico, and now the Minister of Mexico to Ecuador, made a study of the Indians of Peru and Ecuador. His description of the situation today differs little in essence from the study of Tamayo. That Saenz must have been scientific and objective is revealed by his present position. Ecuador would hardly have admitteid him as Mexico's representative if his analysis of the Ecuadorian Indian were either unsound or prejudiced.

He speaks of the latifundio, of its feudalism, of its absenteeism, of the economic inefficiency of large landed estates, and of peonage in Equador, similar in some respects to that in Mexico, and which are handicaps to the development of the Indians. He states that their treatment at the hands of their white employers is severe; and speaks of insufficient land for personal use, enslaving indebtedness, lack of freedom and of privileges which are their lot in spite of favorable legislation. Saenz speaks highly of the Indian and of his aptitudes. He asserts that the outstanding thinkers of Ecuador are aware of the problem and that they propose to better his lot. They understand how the latifundio is an obstacle to the emancipation of the Indian.

THE solution of Ecuador's problem of national integration depends on several factors, some subject to national policy and some dependent on international events. The fusing of her Indian, Negro, mixed and "white" population into one common nationality, into an Ecuadorian "race," must occur slowly and will follow after economic, transportational and educational programs have been put into effect. Biologically, the process takes care of itself. Miscegenation is already responsible for the mixed group there now. Culturally, however, the fusion will depend on legislation and on the knitting effects of closer contacts. That the development of like-mindedness amongst peoples of divergent races depends not so much upon blood as upon other factors is demonstrated time after time in Latin-American evolution. Moises Saenz asserts that the Indians in the Costa of Ecuador are already mestizos in their interests, psychology and philosophy.

Saenz also suggests that the Mexican Indian program has found favor in Ecuador. If this is the case, developments in that land may follow the Mexican pattern. This revolt of 3,000 Indians and other similar revolts suggests, however, that the Indian himself is going to assert his rights. He is awaking from a long slumber and though the economic and political conditions which his opening eyes survey differ little from those which his ancestors for centuries past endured, he finds a new world.

He finds that archeologists, modern anthropologists and other scientists, along with a growing group of young idealistic social revolutionaries, are rehabilitating the reputation of the Indian and throwing overboard certain notions of inferiority. The Indian came to feel inferior because of the treatment he received; today he is slipping off that cloak. He lifts his head and shoulders and is becoming a factor in the political, economic and social life of the world.

Natives Discard Feeling Of Inferiority In New Movement.

G. K.'s Weekly

By
Wm. Lyon Phelps

IN addition to an enormous number of other undertakings, for the last five years G. K. Chesterton has edited a periodical called G. K.'s Weekly. Its purpose has been to propagate the idea of distributism, but the review has been full of articles on general literature and other things, written by distinguished contributors. It has sparkled with wit and humor, and curious illustrations have lent variety to its pages.

In these (nearly) seven years of famine, which no Joseph had foreseen or provided for, the casualties among periodicals have been numerous; even many that have not succumbed altogether have lost their identity in being merged with others. Yet G. K.'s Weekly has gone bravely and successfully along and now appears an attractive little volume (published by Coward-McCann, New York) called "G. K.'s: A Miscellany of the First 500 Issues of G. K.'s Weekly." It has an introduction by G. K. Chesterton himself, in which he deplores the original choice of title for the review.

• • • •

As an illustration of the wit and wisdom in this diverting little volume, I quote Mr. Chesterton's verses on the success of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

On an American Best Seller.

The decadents' bridges broke down in despair:
It is something that some one could fling,
Some sort of a bridge o'er that dreary abyss
In the name of Saint Louis the King:
That Art may yet cross to the people, and purged
Of the poisons & slimes that defiled her,
For when I was a child half the world had gone Wilde,
But now half the world has gone Wilder.

Thomas Hardy.

Who can picture the scene at the starry portals?
—Truly, imagination fails—
When the pitiless "President of the Immortals"
Showed unto Thomas
The print of the Nails.

MOLLY O'FOGERTY.

On Reading "God."

(Mr. Middleton Murry explains that his book with this title records his farewell to God.)

Murry, on finding le Bon Dieu,
Chose difficile a croire,
Illogically said, "Adieu,"
But God said, "Au revoir."

G. K. C.

And be sure and read the article by Desmond McCarthy called "The Eye-Witness." He describes the way every number of this review was prepared for the press. When a little space required filling, one of the group immediately sat down and wrote a poem. He quotes one fine stanza from a ballade with the "pessimistic refrain,"

A railway train has jumped the lines at Crewe:
I haven't got the change for half-a-crown,
I can't imagine what on earth to do . . .
Three bisons have stampeded from the zoo:
A German fleet has anchored in the Clyde,
By God, the wretched country's up the flue

Enough Demagoguery

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Des Moines.

TWO or three weeks ago the writer mentioned the meeting of Huey Long at Des Moines, which was engineered by Milo Reno, president of the Farmers' Holiday Association, as a symptom of a new manifestation of protest against the New Deal.

Huey Long came, was seen, and was morally defeated. Though he may not have reached the peak of his vogue in the Nation as a whole, he received a definite setback in Iowa, and departed somewhat crestfallen—that is, if he ever permits his crest to fall. Whether this setback is encouraging news to the New Deal is a question for argument, but at any rate the situation was interesting.

Contrary to some enthusiastic reports, Huey Long was not greeted by an audience of 18,000 at the State fair grounds. The correspondent must have been confused. There was a crowd of 18,000 gathered in a certain Des Moines amphitheater, but this crowd happened to be one gathered for the sole purpose of witnessing the annual Drake relays, the same day.

The crowd at the State fair grounds was estimated at between 5,000 and 6,000 people, who were obviously there out of curiosity. The Senator made his usual dramatic speech, demanding the hanging of the Wallace element and the repudiation of the New Deal, which, he said, was the "second verse" of the Hoover regime. At the conclusion of his speech he asked all who believed in the redistribution of wealth to hold up their hands, and of course nearly all did so. Then he asked those who did not believe in the redistribution of wealth to hold up their hands, and of course no hands were raised. He then invited the press to take note of the fact. No doubt even the most illiterate economists in the audience felt an inward qualm, knowing that great questions are not settled in that way, but, after all, in a day when demagoguery is in its finest flower, what else can one expect?

• • • •

THE really significant thing that happened during the day was when Huey Long, uninvited by the relays officials, visited the great Midwestern college games, after his State fair grounds appearance.

His reception there was different from those of some of the southern athletic events which he frequents. He was given a liberal booing by the throng and the booers considerably outnumbered the cheerers. Many of the people did not even know he was there, though he strutted down the track in front of the crowd on one side of the Drake stadium, waving his hand to the people and signing autographs. The sum total of his Des Moines visit was a feeling akin to annoyance on the part of the majority of the people and a sensation as of a wet blanket to the Kingfish.

Iowa is a pretty good cross-section of the American electorate. The State leads the Nation in literacy. It sometimes indulges in emotional politics, but there is a vast, thick, solid substratum of good sense, built by the pioneers who believed in the principles of hard work, thrift, courage and making their own way by sheer determination. Despite the flurries of Townsendism, Hueyism and other vagaries, there is a formidable subconsciousness which leads to eventual distrust of the demagogue who promises everything.

If the Des Moines episode is any indication of the trend of sentiment in the Nation at large, it means that the majority of the people are beginning to realize that the Government can not do everything for the individual—that the fantastic schemes for dividing the wealth are impossible and deceptive.

• • • •

IT still undoubtedly holds true that the Milo Renos, the Huey Longs, the Coughlins and the Townsends are virtual allies of the Republicans, in the sense that politics sometimes makes strange bedfellows and temporary alliances of antagonistic elements are sometimes as effective as the more permanent associations of like-minded ones. There will be some profit to the Midwest Republicans when they gather in their preliminary conventions because of the stirring up of political psychology which creates backwashes and eddies.

The Huey Long propaganda, the Townsend scheme, the Coughlin diatribes and similar phenomena are serving as a reductio ad absurdum of some of the principal tenets of the New Deal. These radical attackers of the New Deal are also helping to bring out into daylight the gigantic $5,000,000,000 campaign fund of the Democratic party, and that doesn't hurt the feelings of the Republicans.

The people are increasingly made conscious of the fact that they are not going to get something for nothing. The share-the-wealth and every-man-a-king program of Huey Long is nothing more than a crude form of the hopes stirred by the more adroit and intellectual New Dealers, who doubtless feel a strange sensation in their stomachs every time he opens his mouth to yell. The Nation is seeing the beginnings of a disillusionment caused by the failure of the New Deal to work.

People are beginning to say, "Well, anybody can spend $5,000,000,000 of our money, but it takes real statesmen to bring back business prosperity." They are beginning to sense the inherent demagoguery of borrowing from their children's tax-money to bridge over the disagreeable exigencies of the approaching political campaign. And when the full awakening comes, there will be the devil to pay.

"We're out of menus, sir—if you write any more notes you'll have to furnish your own paper!"

Virginia Tech's June Exercises Are Outlined

Locklin Bell Is Elected Valedictorian and George Beamon Salutatorian.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., May 3.—Locklin Savage Bell, Louisville, Ky., has been elected valedictorian of the Virginia Tech senior class, and George Vanderslice Beamon, Suffolk, has been elected its salutatorian. Beside making unusually fine academic records, both Bell and Beamon have been prominent in various student activities. Bell is studying mechanical engineering.

Bell Is Track Captain.

Bell is captain of the track team, making a fine record as a two-miler. He is chairman of the student branch of the American Institution of Electrical Engineers, a member of Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholarship fraternity; Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity; and Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity. He is first lieutenant of the headquarters battery.

The Grand Lodge of Virginia Masons will have charge of this ceremony. The Rev. Thomas W. Hooper, D. D., Culpeper, is grand master.

Dr. Brown will make the address at the honors day exercises in honor of the membership of the six national honorary fraternities that have chapters at Virginia Tech.

Other events scheduled for that day are alumni class reunions, meeting of the Alumni Association, class banquets, engineering exhibits and dances of the German and Cotillion Clubs.

Somerset Farmers Busy at Planting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., May 3.—Somerset County's early tomato crop reached the height of its planting season this week. Although Somerset farmers raise a large number of tomato plants in hot beds, the supply is inadequate and growers depend to a great extent on field-grown plants shipped into the country from Georgia, the first of which arrived about two weeks ago and have since been coming in daily by truck and carload.

Somerset orders with Georgia growers, mostly in the vicinity of Tilton, totaled more than 5,000,000 plants so far this season.

Practically all of these plants are set out in the fields by hand, it having been found almost impossible to regulate a machine planter to properly space the plants so they could be cultivated in two directions. The plants are set four feet apart each way, and an experienced farmer, using a small hand hoe, which is more rapid than a trowel, can set out three acres in a day.

Somerset farmers manure and fertilize their early tomato land heavily and more than 500 tons of commercial fertilizer have already been distributed through local dealers.

3 Counties Set Spelling Tests For Next Week

Page, Frederick, Madison to Participate in Post's Contest.

Three more counties have set the dates of their matches in the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post.

Page County spellers will meet next Friday afternoon, May 10, at 3 o'clock in the school at Luray to determine their representatives in the area finals.

In Frederick County, Maryland, the match will begin next Saturday, at 10 a. m., in the Parkway School at Frederick.

The Madison County match will be held in Madison High School Thursday at 8 p. m.

Two More List Winners.

Two more Loudoun County schools have registered the names of their best spellers for the match in Leesburg this afternoon. Waterford will send Robert Donaldson and Harold Paxson. George W. Compher will represent Brooklyn. Charles S. Monroe, principal of Leesburg High School, where the match will be held, will preside.

Maryland Democrats Solicit Funds From School Teachers

Got Names From 'Good Fairy,' Chairman Says, Admitting Demands.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 3.—Maryland's school teachers have been solicited for funds by the Democratic State Central Committee, it was revealed today.

It was indicated that the mailing list was made up from the pay rolls of the city government, but M. Harry Laib, chairman of the central committee, refused to reveal the source of the names. "I got them from the same good fairy to whom I always go when I want anything real bad," he explained.

A protest against soliciting school teachers for campaign contributions was filed yesterday with Mayor Howard W. Jackson by Miss Elizabeth Gilman, Socialist candidate for mayor. Mayor Jackson said he knew nothing about it, but Laib said today he knew all about it."

"I take all the blame for sending the letters," he said. "There is nothing new about it. Usually they call me Mr. Wisinski when I do.

"I got possession of the list in the same way that I always get anything I want real bad. I always go to the good fairy of the Arabian Nights and the good fairy sends me to the wishing well and there is the list. Uusually, I go on Friday, 13.

"In this instance, I picked out the names of everybody I thought was interested in the continuation of good government and would care to contribute to that cause. School teachers were not singled out. The letters went to Democrats of all callings."

Frozen Feet Victim Dies After Operation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Marion, Va., May 3.—His feet frozen during wintry weather on Walkers Mountain, John Clapp died in Southwestern State Hospital here after an operation for removal of both his legs above the knees.

Several weeks ago a strange man was reported rambling on the mountain. Later the man appeared at the home of John Havens in such condition that J. F. Ward, county health officer, was called.

It was found that the wanderer was unable to walk farther.

Clapp was committed to an asylum hospital, where it was found impossible to save his legs. The operation was performed late last week.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

The Washington Post.

What Religion Means to Me

Executive Secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Religion is not an abstraction, nor is it a creed, though right belief is, of course, important, but life—the life of God in the soul of man—which we undertake to express in all that we are and do. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton calls it "the unifying spirit of all life." Some people may try to keep it in a separate compartment, reserved for use on Sundays, or when one goes to church. There is nothing vital to such a conception; that is a travesty. To me real religion means having the spirit and attitude of Christ and making these dominant in all human relations. It is a deep inner experience as the soul comes into contact with God, but it must work itself out into all the moral and social phases of everyday life. Only thus can Christians really be "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth."

So religion brings a consciousness of God, as one becomes aware of this personal relation to Him and of His nearness, His comradeship, and His power. But to me it means also that one must bear witness of a changed life and must join with others in united efforts to bring in the kingdom of God, which is the universal reign of love and righteousness, of justice, and peace, of brotherhood and good will.

Through the years it has brought me into a goodly fellowship of persons with like faith and purpose, the benefit of which I feel daily. This is the real "communion of the saints," and what wonderful people we find who are walking this road with us, as we seek to know and do His will. There are evils to be overcome, great principles at stake, important tasks to be done. Religion should bring us together in a great concert of prayer and service for the accomplishment of these results. My religion gives me an enduring sense of that fellowship in worship and work, with God and like-minded men; effective both for the life that now is and for that which is to come.

Everlasting Punishment Is Christ, Scientist, Topic

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Proverbs 16:6: "By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known" (Luke 12:2).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "'Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him.' Suffer no claim of sin or of sickness to grow upon the thought."

Works Session On Allotments Called Tuesday

Roosevelt Summons Board Col. Wood to Be Business Agent.

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that the machinery to handle the vast $4,880,000,000 works program will start clicking next Tuesday.

On that day, he told his press conference, the Allotment Board, which will pass on all projects, will hold its first meeting at the White House.

This is the agency to be headed by PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes. Other branches of the works set-up will include an applications division, headed by Frank C. Walker, and a division on progress, in charge of FERA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

The President did not say so, but presumably he will issue the executive orders formally bringing these organizations into being within the next few days. The Walker division, he remarked, already is functioning to some extent, receiving applications for projects.

Power Unit Working.

Mr. Roosevelt read to newspapermen a letter from Morris L. Cooke, new chief of rural electrification, which announced that he has an organization already going in the Interior Department for handling projects of this character.

Cooke, a Philadelphia power expert, inclosed the draft of an Executive order creating his agency, which Mr. Roosevelt indicated he will act on in the near future. The President remarked that Cooke's action in setting up a going concern in advance of the order was an example of speed.

The Walker division is another agency doing business before its creation by Executive order. Walker is director of the National Emergency Council and is using this organization as the nucleus for his division.

A number of projects, including the $125,000,000 Florida trans-State canal, will be submitted at the first meeting of the allotment board, it is indicated, but whether they will be acted on at this session could not be determined.

Mr. Roosevelt cleared up one point when he said that Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., will be named as the business representative on this board. Several others, including a representative for labor, have yet to be chosen.

One of the problems to be laid before the board will be the basis on which loans and grants will be made to cities. The President said no hard and fast rule could be adopted, but that cities would be treated, in general, in accordance with their ability to pay.

La Follettes Offer Plan.

In reply to a question about highways, the President said that an amendment to the works bill made it uncertain whether some sparsely-settled States could obtain any projects besides highways and grade crossings.

The amendment lays down a formula for highway allocations, giving the less-populated States a guaranteed share of the fund. Thus, all of the unemployed in some States may be taken up on highway work, Mr. Roosevelt remarked, making it impossible to provide other projects.

The President said that the La Follette brothers—Governor and Senator of Wisconsin—had presented an interesting proposal for a State-wide works program in their conference with him Thursday. The plan was started by former Gov. Schmedeman and continued by Gov. Phil La Follette.

Well Known Men Subject of Threats

William Fox, former film magnate.

These names, Federal agents said, were on a list found in Zmindak's belongings.

By the Associated Press.

Government agents announced last night that Peter Zmindak, 22-year-old Bridgeport (Conn.) factory worker, had confessed to sending extortion letters to five men and women in New York City, Bridgeport and New Haven, Conn. He demanded more than $37,000.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of Justice Department agents, said Zmindak was arrested last Saturday while loitering in the lobby of a Bridgeport hotel, apparently hopeful of collecting money. Zmindak had no previous criminal record.

Those who received the threatening notes, Hoover said, were Louis L. Strauss and Carl N. Loeb, New York City brokers, Mrs. Henry W. Farnham, of New Haven, and Miss Annie B. Jennings and Charles Shipman Payson, of Bridgeport.

Hoover said that Strauss, once associated with former President Hoover, received a letter December 10 which demanded $7,500 and threatened kidnaping his children. Ten days later another letter directed Strauss to take the money to a Bridgeport hotel lobby.

On January 2 Strauss received a third and final letter which said the "negotiations were indefinitely postponed."

Loeb received a letter December 9 which demanded $7,000 and threatened "personal harm," Hoover said. This also directed the money should be sent to the hotel lobby.

Mrs. Farnham received a letter April 4. It demanded $10,000 and also threatened bodily harm. Miss Jennings received a similar demand for $12,500 on April 13. Mrs. Farnham was asked to check the money at the Stratfield Hotel at Bridgeport. Miss Jennings was asked to insert a situation-wanted advertisement in the Bridgeport Times-Star after which the extortioner was to issue instructions.

On April 13 a small boy called at the hotel lobby in Bridgeport and was arrested by Government agents. The boy had a note instructing delivery of the Farnham package and also written instructions for delivery of the money.

Trade Leaders Misrepresent, Roosevelt Says measure, he said, but the rest of the State was for it.

Likewise, he said, the great majority of business men are in favor of workmen's compensation, yet chambers of commerce spent thousands of dollars in opposing this act in New York. Despite their efforts, the measure was passed and is still operating smoothly after two decades, it was declared.

The argument of business men has been to let them correct their own problems, Mr. Roosevelt said. Experience has shown, he added, however, that unless there is some check by Federal, State or municipal authorities, business will ignore its own rules—as was the case in the Triangle fire.

Here the President picked up a clipping and read from an interview that appeared in yesterday's Post with Francis E. Powell, head of the United States Chamber of Commerce in London. Powell expressed himself "shocked" with the attitude of United States business leaders, asserting that Europe was "amazed" at criticism of the New Deal.

The President read on, quoting Powell:

"Some admitted perhaps the recovery work has done some good—shall we say they grudgingly admitted it?"

Mr. Roosevelt paused over the word "grudgingly," asking correspondents if they caught the psychology of that.

Generalities Charged.

Continuing, he said that the interesting thing about the chamber speeches was that they ignored the human side of events. There were a few glittering generalities, such as: "We hate to see old people starve," but that could hardly be called very constructive, the President said.

Winding up, he said he and the Council members appeared agreed on general principles. Further, he is confident the great mass of the people and business men understand the purposes of the Administration. And there will be no retreating from those purposes.

Earlier in the day support for one of those purposes came from the American Federation of Labor, when President William Green and members of the A. F. of L. executive board called at the White House to urge a two-year extension of the NRA.

Green used much the same argument in paying his respects to the chamber of commerce.

"You can search their resolutions from beginning to end," he commented, "and you won't find one single reference to the seriousness of the unemployment situation or to remedies for it. These are not the days when men will be given the support of public opinion when they take a negative position."

Bankers Differ.

A delegation from the American Bankers Association, headed by President Rudolf S. Hecht and including Robert V. Fleming and Tom K. Smith, also expressed a conciliatory viewpoint when they called on the President. The association is opposing certain Administration proposals in the pending banking bill, but Hecht was at pains to explain that it wanted to avoid "an atmosphere of fight."

"It's just an honest difference of opinion, that's all," he said.

The difference concerns Title II of the banking bill, by means of which the Administration is seeking to strengthen control of the Federal Reserve Board over currency and credit. The bankers' association is attempting to keep the Reserve System free from political control and to give governors of Reserve Banks an important role in open-market operations.

Johnson's Sponsor Dies.

Enid, Okla., May 3 (AP).—J. Y. Callahan, 82, who appointed Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, to West Point, died today of a heart attack. Callahan was a territorial Congressman from this State.

Labor Leaders Are Released After Beatings

Levinson and Minor Kidnaped by Masked Men, They Claim.

we were taken about 30 or 35 miles from Gallup.

"It was raining hard and the night was pitch black.

"After driving a long distance, during which they beat us often and cruelly, they stopped the cars and we were thrown out into the highway. They drove off and left us.

"We walked all night long and finally reached the hogan (house) of a Navajo Indian about noon today.

"He was kind to us, gave us something to eat and then brought us to the Tohatchi Hospital in his truck."

The Indian told of his surprise when two weary, blood-soaked men walked up to his door and asked for aid.

Levinson said both he and Minor had suffered severe head wounds and body bruises. He said they were beaten with blackjacks and bare fists.

Minor Communist Writer.

A physician at the hospital said he had not yet been able to ascertain extent of the men's injuries but that it appeared both had been brutally beaten.

"They were very weak from exposure and loss of blood," he said.

Levinson said he would be able to identify two or three of his abductors, despite their hoods. He also could identify their car.

Minor said he would return to Gallup and "see this thing through."

Sheriff M. R. Carmichael and two unemployed were slain in a riot which occurred when a group of unemployed protested the legal eviction of one of their number.

"I'm going to make this a bigger thing than the Mooney case," Minor said. He is a Communist writer and former editor of the Daily Worker, Communist Party organ. Levinson long has been an attorney for the International Labor Defense.

Ridicules "Hoax" Charge.

Levinson said they would remain until a guard arrived and then return to Gallup.

"We are not going to be intimidated by any bunch of masked men," Levinson said. "We came here to aid these unemployed laborers who lack funds to obtain a defense in any other way and we are going to see it through."

Minor was told Gallup police officials charged that the reported kidnaping was a hoax, designed to gain sympathy for the cause of the accused men.

"If it was a hoax," he said, with a wry grin, "you'll have to admit we carried it pretty far to beat each other up like this."

Marked Reduction Seen In Deficit of Virginia

Richmond, Va., May 3 (AP).—Even with Virginia's governmental income running approximately $1,100,000 behind budget estimates, Gov. Peery anticipates a marked reduction in the State's deficit when the current fiscal year ends June 30, compared with the deficiency a year previously, he said today.

The $1,100,000 lag was calculated by Budget Director J. H. Bradford, who said his estimate did not take into consideration any income from the A. B. C. Board's operations above the $1,675,000 already earmarked for the State.

Supreme Court Junking of NRA Held Possible into an explanation that he clearly relished.

"When a customer comes in and asks for some chickens," he said eagerly, "why, straight killing means you've got to put your hand into the coop and take out whichever chickens come to you first."

"And it was that for which you were convicted?" asked Justice McReynolds dryly.

"Not That Chicken—."

"On ten counts," returned Heller ruefully, "and fined $5,000 and given three months in jail." He shook his head mournfully. "Why, on one count," he continued, his tone tinged with outrage, "it was testified that a customer came into the store and asked for 11 chickens. Ten chickens were taken from the coop. The rabbi's assistant stood there and killed them as they were taken out. Then we came to the eleventh. The customer said he didn't want that one, but another one."

"My client," continued Heller, indignantly, "my client said, 'The code says you've got to take that one.' That's straight killing. 'They've got inspectors watching me,' my client said. 'That's him—that's him over there'."

"Well," Heller related sadly, "the customer said, "All right, if I've got to take that chicken then I don't want any of them. He walked out on us." The little lawyer looked appealingly at the nine justices above him on the bench. They were smiling and the court rang with laughter.

"What if the customer got a sick chicken?" asked Justice McReynolds. "Well, if it's a sick chicken it can be rejected," he explained, "but if a customer wants only half a coop of chickens, he has to take half, just like this."

He sliced an imaginery coop in half with a gesture of his arm.

"What if the chickens are all at one end of the coop?" put in Justice Sutherland, but Heller's reply was drowned out in the fresh outburst of laughter.

Richberg Makes Smooth Plea.

Aside from this diverson, the day's arguments were on the usual plane of solemnity. A theater critic would have said, however, that Heller stole the show—and captivated his audience, though the packed courtroom was due to Richberg's appearance. He was the advertised star performer and made a smooth, forceful presentation, sliding gracefully over thin ice. He had been sworn in as a special assistant to the Attorney General to make the chief plea for the life of the NRA, which he temporarily heads and helped to create.

Richberg dwelt heavily on the emergency out of which NRA grew. Wood countered later that emergency did not permit Congress to go beyond the Constitution and scrap the dual form of our Government, State and Federal. Richberg equally stressed the voluntary nature of codes, and pictured the NRA law as paving the way for voluntary co-operation.

"The NRA sought to bring order through a system of codes," he said. "It tried to crystallize the expression of fair practice in business. If Congress is powerless to stop the vicious cycle of wage-cutting, then it is important indeed. There has been criticism of regimentation under codes. Why, there is regimentation of commerce every day on the highways where traffic rules, traffic lights and traffic laws impede the movement of interstate commerce. If it were not for regimentation, reckless drivers would make commerce impossible. It is regimenattion that brings order out of chaos."

Price-Fixing Discussed.

Justice Sutherland asked about the automobile code fixing trade-in prices for used cars.

Richberg replied that this applied only to trade-ins on new cars. Used cars could be sold otherwise at the market.

"Yes; but it does prohibit the dealer and the owner from agreeing upon a price," returned Justice Sutherland, "and thus limits liberty of contract."

"To that extent it does," conceded Richberg, with a smile.

Mr Wood, sticking closely to a prepared brief, hammered hard on the point of the dual system, the enumerated powers of Congress. He repeated that the codes seek to regulate all human activity from the cradle to the grave, and beyond. The Constitution would never have been adopted, or ratified, he argued, if it had been supposed the Government would undertake to exert such powers.

"The basis upon which the existence of such power is asserted is destructive of our dual form of government," he concluded, "and subversive of our political, economic and social institutions. If, as many believe, the Federal Government should be converted into some form of state socialism, whether Soviet, Fascist or Nazi, or some other brand, the accomplishment of this transition can be effected only through constitutional amendment."

Code-Making Also Topic.

Reed wound up the arguments, and again ran into a barrage of questions, turning on the manner in which codes are made—the delegation of law-making to the President, and in turn by him to NRA officialdom. Justice Butler sought vigorously for "the facts," and for the exact findings on which the President "may" proclaim a code. When Reed sought an analogy in the tariff commission's findings on which the President might change rates of duty, Justice Butler retorted:

"Where are the corresponding conditions in this code?"

"Obviously," admitted Reed, "they are not precisely the same methods as to standards."

"Where in the act is the standard for fixing wages and hours?" Justice Butler added. "What words in the act would you turn to, to define the standards?"

Justice McReynolds followed with more questioning on this line. The replies served further to point the inescapable similarity between this case and the court's "hot oil" edict that Congress had exceeded its authority in delegating legislative powers. And, as questions of the bench brought out, penal provisions were coupled with the new laws proclaimed under NRA.

NRA Fate in Jeopardy.

NRA'S fate seemed deeply in jeopardy as argument ended. The question thus projected is, not only the time of the decision, but the possible effects on the action of Congress in extending NRA.

Speaker Byrns made plain last night that there is no great rush. Attentive to labor's protest against the short extension of the law, he said:

"I know of no good reason to extend NRA for only nine months and then have another fight next spring. But I do not know what the Ways and Means Committee is going to do. And I don't know what the House is going to do. As we approach the expiration date of NRA, business begins to realize it should be extended. There is a change of sentiment. I can tell that from my mail."

While expressing distates at presenting his qualifications and accomplishments, he said:

"I hope, however, it may not be unseemly for me to say that while I have not been a police court lawyer, I have been assistant attorney general of Virginia, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, and have presented and won for the Government in the Supreme Court of the United States 16 out of 20 cases, including the MacCracken case.

Cites Victories Over U. S.

"In my private practice it has been my fortune to secure various judgments against the Government ranging in amount from $30,000 to more than $300,000.

"Assuming, and the fact seems certain, that Mr. Fitzpatrick's (John R. Fitzpatrick, counsel for the subcommittee on crime) conception of me as a lawyer and District Attorney is reflected in this report, I am perfectly willing to rest my reputation and the efficiency of the office upon the testimony of other assistants of my predecessor who loyally served for months under me and are now in private practice, not to mention, of course, those loyal assistants of my predecessor now retained by me."

Garnett also came to the defense of his aid, Karl Kindelberger, whose removal was also recommended by the sub-committee for his conduct of prosecutions in Police Court.

"No judge of any court in this District has complained to me of the conduct of the District Attorney's office nor of any assistant save Mr. Fitzpatrick. The work of the office in the Police Court has never been more efficiently conducted. The trials of jury cases there are current."

Defends Bonding Practice.

Garnett recalled that the District Bar Association appointed a special committee to investigate bonding practices, especially with regard to Police Court, when he became United States Attorney.

"Since I have been District attorney and Mr. Kindelberger has been in charge of the Police Court, all complaint has stopped and there has been no occasion for the committee to function, and the bonding business, as all other business in that court, is on a satisfactory and high plane."

Taking up each in turn, Garnett attempts to answer the testimony against his office by James W. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, and Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations.

"Mr. Yaden's assumption that prosecuting officials are responsible for the delays in trials is refuted by the facts," he said. "The only case vouched by him as having been unduly delayed during my term of office is the Buccolo case, where Mrs. Buccolo had killed her husband and was prosecuted for murder.

Recalls Buccolo Delay.

"It is worthy of note that Mr. Yaden is a friend of Mrs. Buccolo, was a witness for her and attested her high character, and the delays were all sought and obtained by her solely on account of the protracted illness of her counsel."

In reply to Mrs. Wiley's suggestion that there should be a woman prosecuting attorney to "do the work in the Domestic Relations Court," Garnett said that most of this litigation is handled by the corporation counsel's office rather than the United States Attorney.

To Smith's complaint against "the slipshod method of continuing criminal cases and accepting pleas," he replied:

"The record of this office shows that cases are not continued except for good cause shown, including illness of counsel, defendants or material witnesses, or the engagements of counsel in other courts or cases, or sometimes by the Government when it appears to be in the best interests of the administration of criminal justice."

Garnett dismisses the assertion that the Women's Bar Association petitioned the President to remove him with the observation that the resolution "was obviously due to an alleged interview, which was not authentic, that I would not appoint a woman as one of my assistants, but in any event this has nothing to do with the conduct of the office."

He answers the charge of the sub-committee that he was not familiar with certain criminal statutes by saying that he did not expect to be quizzed "in respect of the many complexities and intricacies of our criminal statutes." He added that every lawyer has to refer to the law books in such instances.

Denies Cases Untried.

Denying the assertion that there are untried gambling cases as much as a year old in his office, Garnett cited the record and stated that "at the date of my testimony there had had not been sufficient time to try these gambling indictments further than as hereinbefore stated."

"It is true that I have participated in the trial of only two criminal cases, and that in both of them the Government did not prevail," he said in reply to another charge.

"These two cases were the prosecution of Bishop Cannon and the prosecution of Mrs. Buccalo for murder * * *. It is not my conception of the duty of a district attorney to take some cases which are easily won and try them, in order to make a record of cases successfully prosecuted, nor has it been the policy of my predecessors."

Garnett defends himself against the charge of being "entirely ignorant of Police Court activities" by stating that his remark had been misinterpreted. He said that he keeps in daily contact with his assistants assigned to Police Court.

Holds Ignorance Triviality.

He dismisses as trivial the fact that he did not know whether or not defendants have the right to testify at preliminary hearings and the length of service as jurors in Police Court. This ignorance, he said, "has nothing to do with my fitness to hold office."

District Supreme Court justices who called on Attorney General Cummings were Jennings Bailey, Oscar Luhring and James M. Proctor. They declined to comment—but Henry Suydam, special assistant to the Attorney General, announced:

"A delegation of three justices representing all of the justices of the District of Columbia Supreme Court called on the Attorney General and made strong representations for Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney for the District of Columbia. No other statement will be made."

Reporters later discovered Blanton leaving Cummings' office.

"I came to bring the Attorney General a May Day bouquet," he said. "After all, I'm from Texas—and I came here on Texas business."

Earlier in the day he took the floor in the House to complain that a newspaperman had been "snooping" around his office when Inspector Albert J. Headley and he were in cloeseted conference. He also complained against stories written about him in the Washington Herald, the Washington Times and The Washington Post.

Asks Speaker's Protection.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "I want you to take some steps to prevent them from printing lies about me and to prevent their snoopers from hanging around my office."

As rumors continued regarding a possible successor to Maj. Brown, Inspector Edwards, asked if he would accept the position if offered him, said:

"I would take the job if offered to me. I have never sought it and do not now. I hope to serve under Maj. Brown for many a day to come. I would certainly not want to succeed him now, as he is one of the finest superintendents the department has ever had."

Inspector Bean, whose impending retirement was reported Thursday, said he would not file an application for retirement before the Shrine convention in June as he had been invited to lead the parade. He declined to discuss his plans after that.

Other civic leaders who joined Sylvan King in indorsing Maj. Brown and in expressing "the wish and hope" that he be retained as police chief were Burd W. Payne, George Plitt, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Charles Frame, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Melvin Sharp and Ed Shaw.

WASHINGTON'S FASTEST GROWING NEWSPAPER

Polish Envoy Entertains At Reception

National Day of Patek's Home Country Is Observed.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Polish Ambassador, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, entertained at a brilliant reception yesterday afternoon in celebration of the national day of Poland. It was a dignified occasion, but after the guests had greeted their host, and congratulated his President through the ambassador, they divided into groups and wandered through the charming drawing rooms of the embassy. The ambassador was assisted in receiving by Mme. Sokolowski, wife of the counselor of the embassy. Mr. Sokolowski is in Chicago where yesterday he represented his government at the celebration in that city. Mme. Sokolowski wore a frock of brown printed crepe with a smart hat of brown straw and a scarf of silver fox around her shoulders.

In the ballroom of the embassy beneath the famous portrait of Gen. Pilsudski, field marshall of Poland, and spectacular war hero, was spread a buffet, and on the other side of the room there was a buffet where many gathered to drink toasts to the Polish Republic. In the dining room there was still another buffet, and in the drawing room, Sidney and his orchestra played throughout the afternoon. Everywhere there were vases of flowers in the Polish colors of red, white and green.

The son of the president of Poland, Mr. Joseph Moscicki, former Secretary of the Embassy, and his pretty blond wife, were missed yesterday, for on former occasions Mr. Moscicki received with the Ambassador, and Mme. Moscicki was there to chat with the guests in a charming afternoon costume. They are now at Mr. Moscicki's new post in Berne, Switzerland. The Diplomatic Corps was well represented, as well as official and residential circles. The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, arrived and left early, as is his custom, and was seen, in spite of the rain, walking to his car far up on Sixteenth street, as he left.

Peruvian Ambassador.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was chatting amiably with the Misses Patten, while not far away was the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, with members of his staff, and the lovely Frau Sholtz, wife of the First Secretary of the embassy; Frau Lohmann, wife of the Second Secretary, and the Third Secretary, Herr Gustav Struve, with his bride.

Former Senator and Mrs. George H. Moses were also glimpsed, surrounded by a large group of friends. They have been spending several weeks in the Capital. The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, was again answering inquiries for Mme. Troyanovsky, and was able to say that her attack of the mumps was so improved that she will appear in a few days. The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson, was there early in the afternoon and much later his two daughters arrived with a group of young friends.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Munir were chatting with Mme. Djalal, wife of the Minister of Iran, and Mrs. Sol Bloom, and the subject of their conversation was the crowning of Mlle. Nella Veverka, daughter of the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, as Queen Shenandoah, which they had attended in a party on Thursday.

Others seen there were Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With, accompanied by the latter's sister, Mlle. Inez van den Broeck d'Obrenan, who has just returned from New York; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close, and the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern were there with their daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, represented the Cabinet group. Representative Caroline O'Day was there from the House of Representatives, and Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah, wearing a costume of pale beige, with a large violet hat, was also present, as were Mrs. Robert D. Carey and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wives of Senators.

Others at Party.

Others glimpsed, just to name a few of the many distinguished persons, were the Undersecretary of State, Mr. William Phillips; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the wartime President; Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the former Secretary of State; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wives of Associate Justices of the Supreme Court; Justice O. R. Luhring, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and Mrs. Luhring; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison, the former, rumor reports, as having been named as our next Minister to Rumania; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitla Stinson, Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Snow and Mrs. William T. Mann.

Also seen were Mrs. Walter Tuckerman with her guest, Miss Flora Clark; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Taussig, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, Mrs. Balir Bannister, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harry O. Chalkey, Mrs. Carlos del Mar, and the Chief of Staff of the Navy and Mrs. William Standley.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

Any exalted feeling of self-righteousness is likely to be a dangerous bit of conceit to indulge in today. It will pay to be both considerate and sympathetic should a friend come to you with some trouble, trial or tribulation. You may be in a position to lighten his burden by simply speaking words of encouragement, and planting the seed for the right sort of thoughts to develop.

Be careful how a harum-scarum friend influences you today, for his persuasive tongue is likely to make you believe the plausibility of almost any argument he advances. By magnifying trifles today you will find you are making "mountains out of mole hills," with a trail of troubles leading from them.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those suffering from the first symptoms of love, will be wise not to try to see how great a strain their beloved one's patience can stand before it gives way, as it might be a disastrous experiment.

If a woman and May 4 is your birthday, your versatility is probably so varied that you are capable of doing many things moderately well. It might be advisable to concentrate on one or two, so as to reach a degree of perfection, rather than so many with a lack of finished completeness.

If a man and May 4 is your natal day, you should be interested in politics, art, law, writing, educational work, or specialized selling. The degree of the success you attain may depend on the amount of effort you actually make.

Drafting of Leaders Will Stop Wars, Dr. Hamilton, of Harvard Faculty, Says

Underwood & Underwood.

Few women can claim a longer list of "firsts" than Dr. Alice Hamilton, noted pacifist, of Boston, Mass. First to make a detailed study of industrial poisons, she was, later, the first woman to serve on the health committee of the League of Nations, and also the first woman to occupy a chair in Harvard Medical College.

She Finds a Decided Trend to Pacifism Among Youths.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF THE MEN who waged wars had to fight them, the peace movement would attain its goal. If mothers and sisters had to exchange their comparatively comfortable existence for battle-front experiences, they would exert every effort to preclude another war.

These are conclusions of Dr. Alice Hamilton, of Harvard University, who came to Washington to attend the twentieth anniversary dinner of the International Congress of Women.

A small, attractive woman whose dark, silver-threaded hair matched her gray and black knitted suit, Dr. Hamilton yesterday received an avalanche of visitors, telegrams and flowers in her suite at the Willard and yet found time enough to tell something of her belief in the peace movement and to recount some of her experiences since she has been interested in it.

"First" Several Times.

Dr. Hamilton, one of the outstanding women in the United States, has a number of "firsts" to her credit. In 1910 she was appointed special investigator of industrial diseases in Illinois, the first woman to make such a survey. Following this, she was for a number of years connected with the Department of Labor, the first woman appointed to investigate industrial poisons. She was, also, the first woman to serve on the health committee of the League of Nations and was the first woman to occupy a professor's chair at Harvard Medical School.

Furthermore, she was one of the 46 American women who attended the international congress for women, held at The Hague in 1915. Later, she accompanied Jane Addams on her visits to the warring and neutral countries of Europe.

A pacifist for many years, Dr. Hamilton is convinced the need for world peace is more necessary today than ever before. Furthermore, she feels that world peace is inevitable "because it is rooted in common sense," and she is hopeful it will be an accepted thing "before another war is thrust upon us."

She believes arbitration can be successfully employed to settle disputes between nations just as it is used to settle differences between individuals and organizations. She thinks that if all countries had joined the League of Nations, it would have been a definite step toward world peace, and that adherence to the World Court would have been the next best measure toward insuring world peace.

Dr. Hamilton is also convinced that the majority of younger persons object to war; that they question their parents' opinion on militarism, much as they do on everything else. "Modern youth is definitely inclined toward pacifism," she said, "but, unfortunately, youth will be conscripted for war rather than consulted as to whether war is necessary."

World More Complicated.

She further pointed out that young persons today have to cope with a much more complicated world than their fathers and mothers. Growing up in a depression-ridden time when the after affects of the last war are still coming to a head in terms of unemployment and soaring prices, young people are realizing war is as futile as it is inhumane and that "this primitive method of settling disputes is an insult to intelligence and modern civilization," said Dr. Hamilton.

"We will have world peace," she went on, "but whether we can convince older people of its merits now or will have to wait until the youth of today grows old enough to hold the reins of government in its hands, remains to be seen."

One of the many distinguished women (including Jane Addams, Carrie Chapman Catt and Mrs. Roosevelt) "exposed as radicals" in Elizabeth Dilling's "The Red Network," Dr. Hamilton yesterday admitted she had "quite a write-up" in the much-publicized book. "But I didn't mind," she added, smiling, "because I was in such distinguished company."

"Yet it seems peculiar," she continued more soberly, "that so many persons confuse pacifists with radicals; for the most conservative people in the world—the Quakers—have always been pacifists."

Insists Need for Peace Is More Urgent Now Than Ever Before.

Discard Information.

While declarer runs down his trump suit a defensive player can not afford to discard all his low cards merely because they can not take tricks. By expert discarding, a player can avoid giving information to declarer regarding his distribution.

On the deal below South might have made the winning play, even with intelligent discarding by West, but his task was made easy.

East, Dealer.

East	South	West	North
1♣	2♡(1)	Pass	2NT
Pass	4♡(2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—No longer a weakness shut-out but a strength-showing bid asking for a raise on about one honor-trick.

2—South naturally infers some mild trump support on the two-notrump bid. There should be some play for game.

The Play.

West opened his fourth-best club, North played the trey, East the six, and declarer ruffed. South led a low diamond and East captured dummy's Jack with his King. The latter shifted to a trump to prevent a diamond ruff in dummy. West won the trick with the Ace and continued with the suit.

South then proceeded to run down his entire trump suit, discarding low spades from dummy. West foolishly threw a low diamond to tell his partner to hold that suit at any cost. Why West threw a low diamond with plenty of worthless cards to discard in every suit will never be known. At any rate, South felt reasonably certain that the diamond was well guarded in the East hand.

After trumps were exhausted, South played his spade Ace, discarding a low club from dummy, as all the spades had previously been played on the hearts. East, in the meantime, had been forced down to a singleton spade, the high club and three diamonds to the ten. Dummy was entered with the Queen of diamonds and the Queen of clubs was led. East won the trick with his Ace, but South discarded his losing spade, cleverly putting the East player on lead. East had to lead away from his ten of diamonds. South finessed the nine-spot with confidence, and won the last trick with his Ace, thus fulfilling a seemingly unmakable contract.

Heat and Rest Allay Swelling in Joints

Knee Is Particularly Sensitive to Knocks, Dr. Cutter Says.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MOST of us go along in the even tenor of our ways blissfully unconscious of the fact that we have muscles, bones and joints. It is only when something goes wrong with the knee, wrist, ankle, elbow, shoulder or hip that attention is called to these important mechanically functioning parts of the body. Those of us who have experienced joint trouble realize full well that infection such as rheumatic fever may attack these areas, causing swelling, great pain and loss of function. Sometimes typhoid fever, pneumonia and scarlet fever are followed by joint inflammation. Then there is the disabling condition known as arthritis, which, in many instances, slowly but progressively destroys the functions of joints.

There are certain other structures situated in the vicinity of joints that are of great importance. They are called bursae and serve as pads or protective affairs so that the tendons of muscles may glide smoothly and without friction with every movement of a joint. They prevent pressure upon bones and serve in a sense as stationary or immovable pulleys. They are composed of rather resistant tissues and are really small sacs lined with a special kind of membrane. Approximately a thousand bursae have been described in various parts of the body and about 18 are to be found around the knee joint alone.

The body seems to have the ability to form bursae wherever and whenever they are needed. If, because of a particular occupation, pressure is applied over a bone or a joint, a bursae may form. For example, shoemakers frequently develope bursae over the sternum (breastbone). If a tailor sits cross-legged these protections may form where the bones of the ankles lie in contact with the table.

Whenever bursae are injured or become inflamed because of overuse or as a result of infection they may enlarge, inclose considerable fluid, and be the source of great pain. When acutely injured, if proper care is not taken, calcium (lime) may be deposited and the enlargement or swelling will become permanent. We say then that bursitis (inflammation of a bursa) has become chronic.

Bursitis about the knee is sometimes quite disabling. The most common manifestation of this condition is known as "housemaid's knee," or inflammation of the bursa over the kneecap. The knee is particularly liable to injury and bumps, blows or any constant pressure upon the knee may lead to inflammation of the pad that protects the joint.

If the swelling and enlargment has existed for any length of time it is often necessary to remove a bursa by surgical procedure. The case is related of a woman who had sustained a fall in which both knees struck the floor. There was considerable pain, which lasted for 24 hours or so, and some swelling. For the next week or two little discomfort was noted. Following another fall of similar character the area directly in front of the knee joint remained swollen and, at the end of a few months, projected beyond the kneecap approximately one inch. Pain at this time was not severe. The ordinary methods of heat and rest proved ineffective and it was necessary to open and drain the bursa to relieve the pressure.

Prevention lies in avoiding blows and pressure wherever bones come close to the surface of the body. This is particularly true of the knee joint. Should a swelling about a joint occur as the result of a slight injury, rest for the part is important and constant heat should be applied until the swelling subsides. This will improve the circulation and, in many instances relieve the inflammation. Do not bump your knee.

Scallops Held As a Stimulant To Gastric Fluids

Eat plenty of scallops and lobsters and your digestive juices will flow in larger quantities, is the advice of the Biological Board of Canada, which has been carrying on investigations at the Atlantic Biological Station at St. Andrews, N. B.

These findings have an important bearing from a medical point of view when it is desired to increase the flow of the digestive juices in the stomach.

Should Youthful-Looking Woman Deceive Young Fiance About Her Age?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Do you think it's excusable for a woman to deceive the man she loves about her age? That question has been causing me a good deal of worry the past couple of weeks. I am 37 years old, but I can and do pass for 30. I am tall and slender, with a naturally good figure and excellent firm complexion.

• • • •

About a year ago I met, in a business way, a man of 29, who is the most congenial person I have ever known. (I have been married and am now a widow, by the way). We were attracted to each other from the first and he seemed to me like a person my own age, or rather, he makes me feel as if I were his age, or even younger.

• • • •

Two weeks ago he asked me to marry him. I asked him at first if he realized I was older than he is; and he scoffed at the difference, "What's a year or two?" he said. I didn't have the courage then to tell him the real truth, just passed it off. But since then my conscience has been troubling me.

Do you think I should tell him the truth? And if I don't, will I be able to get away with the deception without his ever finding out?

THIRTYISH.

Truth Is Best.

DEAR THIRTYISH: There is a certain point beyond which I think it inexcusable for a woman to deceive the man she loves about her age. And I think that point has been reached when a man asks a woman eight years his senior to marry him, while under the impression she is approximately his own age.

• • • •

In a friendly relationship, even in a romantic affair, a woman can well afford to ignore such a disparity in ages. But when it comes to marriage, I think for psychological and physiological reasons she must find the courage to tell the truth.

• • • •

For one thing, to make a guilty secret of your age is to invest it with a morbid significance which may have no actual bearing on those things which have gone to making the congenial relationship existing between you and your fiance.

• • • •

On the other hand, the most practical argument against the deception lies in the field of potential parenthood. You may be past the age when childbearing is feasible. Should this be true, how would you account for the fact, unless you went on manufacturing lies?

• • • •

In your place, I would tell the man my real age. He's sure to find out the deception, if not the actual truth, sooner or later. Inevitably, I should think there will be old friends or relatives bobbing up to exclaim upon the sore point.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

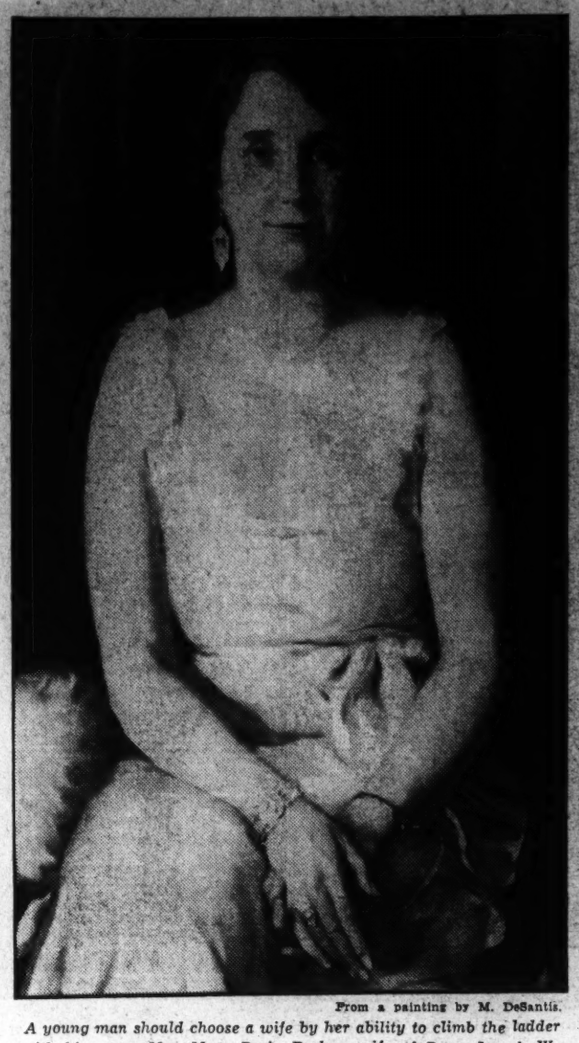
A group of Vassar students, interested in dietetics have prepared a list of satisfactory menus which allow them to gain weight and maintain good health, for only 43 cents per day, according to Dr. Ruth W. Wheeler, director of the Vassar institute of euthenics.

There are moderate quantities of meat, milk and vegetables in the menus, and plain desserts, and less of candy and spinach.

Comeback for Etiquette In Colleges Is Reported



From a painting by M. DeSantis.

A young man should choose a wife by her ability to climb the ladder with him, says Mrs. Mary Perin Barker, wife of Dean Joseph W. Barker, of the Columbia University School of Engineering.

Mrs. Barker, Wife of Columbia Engineer School Dean, Says They Have Learned Manners Promote Business Success.

GOOD MANNERS are coming back in style with the younger set. College boys are studying etiquette. They've learned that the correct way to acknowledge an introduction and to balance a tea cup helps them get along in the business world. And so they are studying the precepts of the newest social mentor, Mary Perin Barker, wife of Dean Joseph W. Barker, of the Columbia School of Engineering.

Mrs. Barker throughout the academic year holds open house on Sunday afternoons for her husband's students. These have proved so successful she was invited recently to lecture at the Newark College of Engineering on the personal and social side of the engineer's training.

The lectures have been compiled into a booklet, "The Technique of Good Manners," which shows signs of becoming a best seller among college men.

How to Choose a Wife.

Says Mrs. Barker:

"Judge the women you know by their ability to climb the ladder with you. Your wife can help carry you to the crest or she can be a chain around your neck. Be proud of her and her appearance. Be assured of her intellectual capacity."

More advice along the same line in the booklet says::

"Don't impair your taste or waste your time in 'playing around' with girls who are obviously beneath your consideration. Don't marry the first girl you fancy yourself in love with. Look the field over carefully and get so well acquainted with women that your choice of a life partner will make marriage the most wonderful, satisfying and happy experience in life—which it should and can be."

Dancing Aids Success.

Dancing is important in the life of a young man who wants to be a social success, according to Mrs. Barker. And, in her opinion, social success is one of the ways to business success. She urges all young men to learn to dance because:

"A beautiful dancer can gain entry into almost any society and, if added to that he has the attributes of a gentleman, there is nowhere he can not go if he really wishes to."

The author of "The Technique of Good Manners" also takes up the problem of finances.

"Taxiing long distances to dances calls for an expense most young men should not be obliged to bear," she says. "But most girls are good enough sports to appreciate the conditions and would rather go in the street car or bus than not go at all. Tell your girl how you plan to go so she can dress accordingly. If it is by street car or bus she will probably greet you with walking shoes on and carrying her dancing slippers in a party bag. It probably won't make any more difference to her than that."

Mrs. Barker recommends that every college man have a sewing kit so he need not go around with holes in his socks or with buttons missing. She declares the idea that these odd jobs belong to women is worn out; believes the boys should look after themselves.

Short Cut to Contacts.

All these things lead to a young man's making friends and, as Mrs. Barker points out, only the people who feel friendly and are kindly toward him will be interested in his success. It is through them that opportunities will come.

Probably the easiest way to make contacts which lead to friendships is to attend social gatherings.

"Going or not going to social affairs is usually a matter of habit," Mrs. Baker says. "It is easy to get into a stay-at-home rut and almost any excuse you give yourself serves the purpose. If you consistently refuse invitations you will wake up some day to the realization that you are not being invited any more. Right now is the time to start going places."

Unfamiliarity with a precise rule of etiquette will be forgiven if one's manner is always courteous and considerate, the newest social mentor adds.

Visitor Spikes Popular Belief Indian Is Lazy

Mrs. Meade, of Shoshone Tribe, Cites Sun Dances as Proof of Energy.

THE WIDESPREAD belief that the Red Man is lazy is a gross mistake. Indians—the Shoshones and Arapahoes, at least—are energetic farmers, progressive stock raisers, and skilled mechanics when they have an objective, when there is a ray of hope they can make a decent living through their efforts.

So reports Mrs. Irene I. Meade, of the Shoshone tribe, who recently came to Washington with a delegation from Wyoming to discuss details of the Indian reorganization act.

"The average Indian is as energetic as the average white man," she said. "You should see the way men and women are working on our reservation today. You should see the way they will work in July when the annual Sun Dances take place."

Reservations Described.

Mrs. Meade described the Shoshone and Arapahoe reservation as "accommodating about 2,000 persons" and as offering "many contrasts between traditional Indian customs and those copied from the white man."

Younger persons in both tribes have adopted the dress and many customs of the white, she said, but older squaws and braves still cling to primitive habits, some of them still living in tents and going to "sweat houses" when they are ill.

The latter, she explained, are circular in shape, eight or nine feet in diameter, and made of willows bent over and covered with canvas. In the center there is a hole for a heated rock. "When water is poured over the rock, there is enough steam to cause the person sitting nearby to perspire profusely," she said. "Some of the older Indians still consider this a cure-all for diseases, but many more, old and young, go to the modern hospital for treatment."

While most of the Shoshone men spend their time farming and raising live stock, the women fashion bead moccasins and belts, she said. In the schools, much exquisite embroidery is also being done.

Schools Center of Life.

She further pointed out that the schools were the center of community life for the Indians in Wyoming, and that young and old, they were taking advantage of practical courses offered there.

Mrs. Meade herself went to a reservation school, then completed a business course at the Sherman Institute in Riverside, Calif., and later attended the University of Wyoming.

A handsome woman with black hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion, Mrs. Meade could easily pass for a white woman. Only her high cheek bones reveal her Indian heritage.

"Are you a full blood?" she was asked.

"I'm a fourth-degree Indian," she said. "There are comparatively few full-bloods among the Shoshones. Most are half or fourth degree."

Michigan State Dance.

Representative Jesse P. Wolcott, president of the Michigan State Association, announces the second dance of the season will be held at 9 o'clock tonight in the ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel.

Diet Formula Now Available As a Powder

Addition of Water Makes a Satisfying Chocolate Flavored Drink.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AFTER the hour-glass figure fashion boiled down to a preference for sylph-like lines, women all over America turned to dieting. Unfortunately many food faddists bombarded the public with quick reducing suggestions, 90 per cent of which physicians disapproved. In the course of the last half century there have arisen hundreds of fantastic diets at variance with sensible dietary regimens. There was the 8-day diet, the carrot and lamb chop diet, the skim milk diet, the raw tomato and boiled egg diet. Even the cigarette diet had its day.

Now the sensible woman who wishes to curtail her curves consults a physician first because she realizes it is essential for her to know whether her surplus weight is merely the result of lack of exercise, overeating, or due to some physical trouble.

She takes pains to learn how many calories she actually needs, and what proteins and minerals are necessary for her health. It has been proven that the average adult of sedentary habits requires 2,250 to 2,500 calories a day, 70 grams of protein, 0.68 grams of calcium and 1.32 grams of phosphorus to maintain vim, vigor and vitality.

Taking all these facts into serious consideration, and working all together in accordance with the newest scientific theories a certain company presents a wholesome, nutritious food in powdered form to help the woman to diet. When this powder is added to water it makes a satisfying chocolate flavored drink, which fulfills the average nutritive requirements. It is composed of ten ingredients carefully selected and proportioned to give a high proportion of biologically adequate proteins in relation to calories. In addition, it is rich in calcium and phosphorus as well as necessary vitamins.

This modern diet food is to be taken for breakfast in addition to the juice of one orange or its equivalent in grapefruit juice, or tomato juice. It is luncheon in itself. In the evening it should be taken along with a normal regular dinner which is low in fats.

This most modern of dietetic foods simplifies the diet problem beyond our fondest hopes and makes it easy to follow a low calory diet. Incidentally, it has been tested and approved by a well-known bureau which investigates new products.

Crystals for the Bath.

There's so much said about how to make the bath a luxurious pleasure for women and so little said about how to make it equally alluring for men. However, one beauty specialist kept the masculine bathers in mind when she created her verdant pine bath crystals, which not only soften the water but give it a delightful scent.

The business man who returns in the evening mentally and physically weary will find that these pine-laden crystals will make his bath soothing and restful and provide a delightful prelude for a gay evening.

Chromium Cocktail Glasses.

There's nothing like going "old-fashioned" in our cocktails with a modernistic set of old-fashioned glasses made of shiny chromium and sold complete with muddlers.

Just to see them makes you thirsty. They are such a delightful low, squat shape that you visualize them immediately filled with that favorite drink.

The muddlers which come with the glasses are set off with a colored knob at the top. To make your set complete you should also buy one of the small chromium trays which cost only $1.

Cellulose Shields.

Warm weather looses half of its grim aspect with the advent of some new shields which you discard after they are soiled. These are made from a chemically treated cellulose material.

They have so many good features it's hard to list them all. First and foremost though they do not rustle, they're not bulky and they have no odor.

Twenty-five of them come in a neatly wrapped cellophane pack which sells for 25 cents. Or you may buy them 8 for 10 cents.

Wooden Bead Bags.

For tea time or the cocktail hour what could be smarter and handier than one of those small wooden bead bags featured in a downtown store? For shopping or for business, it's the big bag that counts—one that can hold the dozens of small items we like to carry with us. But later in the day when we change our ensemble, it's a small bag that will answer our needs and add a dash of chic to our costume.

Pattern No. 755.

THEY'VE OUTGROWN last year's pants? This is nothing to be regretted—in fact, quite the contrary. But it does mean that something must be done about it. Here is a fine pattern that will make just as many shorts and slacks as a boy needs to see him through the summer. And, of course, it's a great saving to sew. Expertly cut, and accurate in size, this is a style that can be depended upon for long, hard wear. An illustrated instruction chart, giving full cutting and sewing directions, comes with the pattern.

Designed in sizes 6 to 14. Size 10 requires 2¼ yards of 35-inch material for the long slacks; 1¼ yards of 35-inch fabric for the shorts.

Cumberland Woman Takes Prize With Strawberry Dish

Mrs. Elizabeth Williams Receives First Award for Syllabub; Miss Cody and Mrs. Burlin Second and Third, Respectively.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THIS week Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, 430 Columbia street, Cumberland, Md., wins first prize, $3, in The Post's recipe contest with her recipe for strawberry syllabub. Second prize, $2, goes to Miss Anne M. Cody, 1504 V steet southeast, for her recipe for strawberry roll, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. C. W. Burlin, 400 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., for her recipe for strawberries supreme.

Honorable mention is awarded Mrs. Clara Royall, 3501 Thirteenth street northwest, for her recipe for strawberry punch, to Mrs. R. C. Holmes, 802 Philadelphia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., for her recipe for strawberry rice ice cream, to Mrs. Eva Hudgins, 101 High street, Annapolis, Md., for her recipe for strawberry and pineapple salad, and to Mrs. Hattie Adams, 2307 H street northwest, for her recipe for strawberry charlotte.

Strawberry Syllabub.

Arrange thin slices of sponge cake, first dipped in sherry, in the bottom of shallow champagne glasses. Cover the sliced strawberries. Whip 1 pint of heavy cream until solid, combine with the whites of two eggs, beaten until stiff and dry. Mix 1 cup sugar, 1½ cups strawberry juice, ¼ cup lemon juice. Add slowly to first mixture. Beat constantly. Fill glasses heaping full and garnish with thin slices of strawberries.

Strawberry Roll.

1 package strawberry gelatin
1 cup boiling water
½ cup powdered sugar
1 cup pastry flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 cup ripe strawberries
Whites of two eggs
2 eggs
Yolks of two eggs
½ teaspoon vanilla

Soak gelatin in a little water, add enough boiling water to make one cup and stir until dissolved. Wash strawberries and add powdered sugar. Let stand for a few minutes to draw the juice, then rub through a coarse sieve, add to gelatin and let mixture cool. When cool and beginning to set, add stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and place in ice box to firm at least two hours before making cake.

Mix and sift pastry flour, baking powder and salt, add the sugar. Beat two eggs and the remaining two yolks together until light. Combine with flour, sugar mixture and vanilla. Pour batter into a buttered pan (long and narrow) lined with buttered wax paper. Bake in slow oven about half an hour.

Turn out cake onto a wooden board over which has been laid a piece of cheesecloth dusted with powdered sugar. Trim edges with sharp knife. Beat gelatin mixture with a silver fork until sufficiently soft to spread evenly on cake. Roll cake (lifting by the cheesecloth) quickly and carefully while hot, in order to prevent breaking. Cool and serve on platter surrounded with fresh strawberries and whipped cream.

Strawberries Supreme.

Wash, drain and hull strawberries. Measure three cups full of whole berries. Place a tumbler in the center of a saucepan and pour the berries around the outer edge of the pan. Remove tumbler and pour three cups of cane sugar in a cone-shape pile in the center of the pan. Place over a slow fire. When the berries begin to simmer around the outer edge of the pan, time and cook slowly exactly 20 minutes. Do not stir. Remove from fire, set aside, and let stand over night (in same pan). In the morning pour cold berries into sterilized jars and seal with hot paraffin.

Never cook more than three cups of berries at the same time. If necessary several cookings may be poured into the same container to cool.

The berries will retain their shape, the juice will thicken, and they will keep indefinitely.

These are excellent as preserves, as a sauce for ice cream, or in bavarian cream.

Strawberry Punch.

1 quart strawberries
2 juicy oranges (peel rind thin)
1 lemon (peel rind thin)
3 pints water

Put the mashed strawberries, orange and lemon juice in a covered saucepan with the water and let it stand over night.

The following day strain the mixture through a fine cloth, squeezing as for jelly making in order to get all the juice.

Sweeten to taste, bottle and place on ice. This amount makes two quarts of punch. The juice is very good served as a breakfast fruit juice.

Strawberry Rice Ice Cream.

3 pints strawberries
2 cups sugar
1 pint cream
1 quart milk
¼ cup rice
½ teaspoon salt

Cook the rice in the milk in a double boiler until the rice is soft, add salt and force rice through a fine sieve. Add the cream and one-half cup sugar. Allow to cool.

Wash and pick over the berries, cut them into small pieces and add 1½ cups sugar. Allow to stand about 1 hour, combine with rice, cream and freeze in a freezer. This is especially nice for a children's party as it is good but not too rich.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Mallory, stenographer in a real-estate office, is the sole support of her mother and brother, Bob. Mrs. Mallory encourages Ellen to develop her tennis ability and the girl is elated when she wins a sectional tournament. When she tells her fiance, Michael Dale, of her plans to enter national competition, he insists that she keep her promise to marry him at once and give up tennis.

They quarrel, much to Mrs. Mallory's secret pleasure. Her chief concern is that Ellen will marry and stop supporting the family. When Ellen finds that her mother has withheld a phone call and letter from Mike the day after the quarrel, she announces that she is going to marry him the minute he returns from a business trip. Seeing that Ellen is determined, Mrs. Mallory airs her debts, amounting to $2,700, which she has no way of paying. Ellen can't let her family down completely, so she signs a note at the bank and promises to pay $20 a month.

Upon his return, Mike whisks Ellen away to Bethany, Mo., and tells her they are to be married. Ellen's protests are in vain, and the ceremony is performed.

Now go on with the story:

IN the weeks that followed, Ellen was to remember this brief honeymoon tenderly—but not happily. Full realization of the step she had taken came to her when the bellboy closed the hotel door upon her and her brand-new husband.

Like an avenging Nemesis the note she had signed that very morning kept flashing into her memory.

"Make your payments on time, Miss Mallory. Keep your interest up. That's the way to make your credit good. Your mother's a fine lady but she hasn't any business sense. Guess she thought principal and interest would just take care of themselves."

And Ellen had signed the note determined to make good at it, to show the bank and Mr. Applequist that she could be trusted, that her word was good.

And now, less than 24 hours later she wasn't Ellen Mallory at all, but Ellen Dale, married to a man who sternly believed that a woman's place was in the home.

Michael, tenderly sympathetic, sensed the mental woe Ellen was enduring. "Listen, darlin'," his loving arms around her, holding her close, "put all the worry out of your pretty head. We aren't obliged to settle every problem that worries us right now. We'll take 'em one at a time."

But again Ellen had tried to tell him about debts. And Mike refused to make a very good listener. "I know all about debts, Ellen," he laughed. "Don't forget that my Dad's the village doctor. I guess the family doctor knows as much about debts as the next one."

Michael Was Gentle.

"But people owe him—he doesn't owe everybody."

Mike chuckled. Held her even closer if such a thing could be possible. Then sternly, "Now listen, Mrs. Dale. You're on your honeymoon. On my honeymoon, too."

Gently Ellen stroked his cheek. "Poor Mike"—softly.

"Poor Mike nothing! Lucky Mike! And I'm not going to have you worry, Mrs. Dale. I told you before that we'd settle our problems when we got to them."

"No," his hand over her mouth, "No, you don't. I don't want to hear the horrible debt details tonight, tomorrow either, or maybe even the next day. Tonight I just want you to know, Mrs. Dale, that you're the dearest and the sweetest and cutest little wife——"

Yes, in Mike's arms it was easy enough to forget.

Ellen thought that if she lived to be a hundred years old she would never forget the tender intimacy of those hours with Mike.

"We'll start driving home slowly, darlin'," Mike said, "so that we'll get to Fairhaven in the early evening. Then we can set up our housekeeping. When I called Chuck I told him to send up what we'd actually need from the furniture store and that we'd probably want to exchange some of the things. But anyway it will be a lark to go into our own house, won't it, sweet? I thought it would be terrible to go to your home or mine or even to a hotel—with our own little house waiting."

"Drive faster," Ellen said after they got into the car again. "Now that we're going to our home, actually going to our home, I just can't wait, Michael dear. I want to see if it's just as sweet as I thought it was. It's been days since I've been down there."

One-arm Driver.

Mike was doing a satisfactory job of one arm driving. "I didn't have much cooperation from you about building that house, Mrs. Dale. So if there are things you don't like about it, then it's your own fault. Sometimes I got so blue, because you wouldn't take an interest in it, darlin', that I could have chucked the whole business."

"That I didn't take an interest, Mike? I did take an interest. But I was just scared to show how big an interest I took—it seemed to me that I had to go there every time with my fingers crossed because if I actually acted as though the little house would ever be finished and that we'd be living in it together, I'd wake up and find that it was all a dream. No, Mike, I didn't dare take the little house seriously."

"Well, you're going to take the little house seriously now. Mrs. Dale, don't think that you aren't and you're going to live there for a good long time—until we get a better place to live, anyway."

Ellen was thinking back, over six months now, to the time when the little house had been started. She had gone out with Michael that first day when the workmen had staked it out just before they'd begun the excavation for the basement and Michael had led her through the imaginary rooms.

And a Fireplace.

"This is the living room, Ellen," he had said, and this the dining room. Right here will be the big bay window that you said we must have, in a southern exposure so your flowers will grow in winter."

"And the fireplace, Michael. Where did you say that would be?"

"Right here, darlin'. You say you wanted easy chairs on either side of it. One, I suppose, will be for you and the other for me—huh, or will it be?"

And Ellen had laughed and told him that they'd sit on the same side of the fireplace, in the same chair for that matter. They had been very happy and gay—but that was before she had realized what a decided and determined resentment her mother had to her engagement with Mike.

Michael Was Patient.

Mike had been patient. He'd waited for more than three years for her and all that time he'd been ready and financially able to take care of her. Maybe Aunt Ellen was right when she said that nothing mattered but taking love when it came, taking it eagerly and gratefully and not stopping to count the consequences.

She tried to tell this to her young husband now, put into words all the things she had been thinking—that, even if it wasn't all easy sailing, it was best to go ahead, get married and do exactly as he had been telling her, face one problem at a time.

Michael nodded gravely as he listened. "I know that's right, dear," he told her. "I'm 26, you're 22. We're both old enough to know our own minds. You love me—how it happens I don't know, and I love you. You're the only girl in all the world——"

Never Loved Marjory.

Ellen could not resist a wistful question, "And Marjory Hutton—you never cared about her?"

Michael laughed long and loud. He had been so fearful of ever winning this elusive little sweetheart of his that it gave him a thrill to imagine that she might be just a touch jealous. "I liked her. She's a nice girl—but not in your class, honey—not a little darlin'."

"Michael, will there ever be a time when you aren't as sweet to me as you are right now?"

"Of course not, darlin'——" holding her hand tightly.

It stood there in the soft gathering gloom—that home of theirs—even livelier that they had visioned it.

A rather plain little home of colonial type with wide, white painted boards and neat shutters at the big, low windows.

"Take it easy, honey," Michael warned when she would have followed. "Sit right there where you are until I get the front door unlocked."

Brother Brought News.

But before he could get the door unlocked a shadow loomed before the car coming from among the other shadows at the side of the house.

"Bob!" Ellen half screamed, already sensing that something had happened.

The shadow quickly resolved itself into the form of Bob Mallory, Ellen's 14-year-old brother. He said, "I've been waiting for you, Sis. I just had a hunch you'd come here first. And you'd better come home right away, Sis. Mom's taking on something awful."

50,000 Brave Storm to Watch Blossom Parade at Winchester

5,000 March in Rain in Feature Event of Festival.

Pageant Canceled, Due to Weather

Queen Refuses to Leave Her Royal Post in Procession.

By C. B. Carr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., May 3.—In trenched uniforms and with artistic floats spoiled by a torrential rain, 5,000 participants in the grand feature parade of the twelfth Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival this afternoon braved a thunderstorm to carry out the parade as scheduled before a crowd of 50,000 persons.

After heavy skies and a chilling northeast wind which had caused festival officials to cancel the pageant, "Dawn, a Pageant of Springtime," scheduled for the forenoon, nearly 100 military, civic and commercial units from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, already in the line of march when rain started, determined to go through with the show.

Rain yesterday had narrowed the festive throng to 15,000 people, had driven the school children's parade to cover and resulted in the queen and her court hastily leaving the scene of the coronation immediately following the ceremony. Overcast skies this morning cut the second day crowd to less than half those expected, officials said.

Queen Refuses to Run.

The white chariot of the queen, Mlle. Nella Veverka, daughter of the Czechoslovakian Minister to the United States, did not escape the fury of the storm, but her majesty heroically refused to abandon her chariot and rode the entire length of the parade surrounded by her maids of honor, Misses Fenton Nelson and Nancy Bowley, and train bearers, Elizabeth Steck Arthur, Jane Cather and Dorothy Hawthorne.

Drum and bugle corps from more than a score of veterans' posts, cadet corps and decorated cars likewise were undaunted.

Royal A. Cather was director of the parade with Dr. Lewis M. Allen, grand marshal, and Dr. George Heist, chief foot marshal.

All along the line of march, about 3 miles in length, spectators sat huddled beneath umbrellas and folded newspapers, frequently casting aside their shelter to applaud the marchers.

Prizes Awarded.

Howard Gardiner Post, American Legion, Drum and Bugle Corps, of Tyrone, Pa., won a $125 prize. Huntingdon Post, Huntingdon, Pa., placed second, $75, and Francis Scott Key Post, Frederick, Md., third, $50.

In the competition among drum and bugle corps of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Portsmouth Drum and Bugle Corps, Portsmouth, Va., was first, $125; Henry Hart Post, Cumberland, Md., second, $75, and Rion Bowman Post, Harrisonburg, Va., third, $50. A silver loving cup was awarded the Washington County Boy Scout Council Drum and Bugle Corps, of Hagerstown, Md.

In the group competition for drum majors, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars Drum and Bugle Corps, Cumberland Valley Hose Company Drum and Bugle Corps, of Chambersburg, Pa., carried off honors.

An artistic float with a group of 20 young girls attired in flowing gowns of pastel shades was first in its class, winning a cash prize of $100. Other winners were Stephens City High School, Stephens City, Va., second, $50; Rotary Club, Winchester, third, cup, and fourth, Kiwanis Club, Winchester, cup.

Other Winners.

A Japanese pagoda, arranged and entered by the C. L. Robinson Ice & Cold Storage Co., Winchester, was first among commercial floats, winning $50. The Winchester Cold Storage Co. entry was second, winning a silver cup; Virginia Apple Storage, Winchester, third, a silver cup, and Standard Oil Co., Winchester, fourth, also a cup.

The Massanutten Military Academy Cadet Corps, of Woodstock, carried off honors among cadet corps, with the Washington and Lee High School Cadet Corps, of Clarendon, Va., placing second. Each received a silver cup.

The grand prize, $250 in cash and a $150 scholarship to the International Correspondence School, for American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars drum and bugle corps, was won by the Harold H. Blair Post, American Legion, Hanover, Pa.

Ruling Speeds State Campaign On Tipsy Driver

West Virginia Decision Backs Commission's Highway Control.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., May 3.—Backed up by a Supreme Court decision that acquittal in a court of law does not remove the West Virginia State road commission's jurisdiction over highways, the commission is preparing to use all of the resources at its command to rid the State of drunken drivers of automobiles.

The Supreme Court's opinion was given in the case of A. A. Steele, of Marion County, who, after being acquitted of an intoxication charge before a justice of the peace, was heard by the State road commission on a charge of operating a motor vehicle "in a manner endangering the lives and property of those using the public highways." Before the commission, Steele offered his acquittal by the justice of the peace as his defense, but the commission revoked his license. He appealed to the Supreme Court, which found that "an acquittal of intoxication is not necessarily an acquittal of dangerous operation" and the "acquittal by the justice of the peace did not affect the jurisdiction of the commission."

Campaign Launched.

Following announcement of the court's decision, James P. Tierney, supervisor of the commission's transportation division, announced plans for a drive to clean up the drunken drivers.

"The commission intends to see to it that the new drunken drivers' law and its companion measure, the financial responsibility act, are rigorously enforced," he said.

"In every case," Mr. Tierney added, "where it is clear, either from the evidence at the trial or in the abstract of the proceedings sent to the Commission, the Commission will revoke the license of an intoxicated driver."

To Insist on Revocation.

Henceforth, the road official asserted, "the commission will give little or no consideration to recommendations of municipal courts or authorities, that operators' licenses be not revoked after conviction in courts."

Mr. Tierney's insistence upon revocation of licenses is regarded as the commission's answer to the familiar complaint of police and enforcement officers, that they are virtually helpless in cleaning up the drunken driver situation because so many courts, especially municipal courts, fail, for different reasons, to find convictions, even when the evidence of guilt is clear and strong.

By the Associated Press.

Chancellorsville Battlefield, Va., May 3.—Had the spectacular sham battle which swept realistically across Fairview Heights yesterday been the real battle, Gen. Lee would have been hurrying battle weary troops eastward to Salem Church today.

Seventy-two years and a day have passed, however, since the strategy of Lee and Jackson enabled a courageous army of Northern Virginia to wrest Chancellorsville from an equally courageous Army of the Potomac, and instead of the wreckage of battle there was merely the debris that remained after a holiday crowd of 30,000 persons had left the scene.

Re-enactment of the stirring drama of the Civil War sponsored by the Department of the Interior and the National Park Service, brought a new realization to thousands of the historic importance of the Fredericksburg and Spottsylvania National Military Park. Many States and a number of foreign nations were represented in the great throng which came to witness the demonstration.

Vivid Simulation of War.

The Virginia Military Institute cadets, with a record to be envied, in impersonating Jackson's troops from the start of his last great flanking movement to the magnificent charge in front of Chancellorsville, might well have been the gray-clad hosts that were hurled against Gen. Joseph Hooker's stubborn defenses. It was easy to imagine the third cavalry as the troops of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart.

It was war—grim and awe-inspiring—but without its grim after effects, and only a miniature reproduction of the terrific battle of May 2 and 3, 1863.

The fighting was made graphic by Dr. Douglas Freeman, Richmond editor, who described the preliminary movements at the bivouac stone, scene of the last meeting of Lee and Jackson, and at Fairview Heights.

Dr. Freeman also spoke briefly of Lee as a leader of the post-war South and of the reunited Nation.

Later Headed University.

He told of a conversation between Lee and Capt. Justus Scheibert, a German military observer, at the height of the battle in which the Confederate chieftian discussed the future of Southern youth after the war, especially in education. Afterward, he became the president of Washington College, which later became Washington and Lee.

Dr. Freeman mentioned that while the Confederate flags would be planted on the heights of Fairview, the United States flag would not be captured and he offered fervent thanks that the Stars and Stripes now float over a united Nation.

Aeroplane maneuvers by planes from the Quantico Marine Base were called off and the planes returned to the base because of a sudden wind and rain storm. A dress parade by the cadets in honor of Adjt. Gen. Samuel G. Waller and 25 visiting adjutant generals, was also passed by for the same reason.

The crowd could not be definitely estimated. John Q. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, said at least 30,000 attended, while Col. Charles F. B. Price of the Fleet Marine Force, grand marshal for the occasion, thought there were easily 40,000.

Judge Warns About Talks To Witnesses

Liquor Case Defendants Given a Lecture on 'Conversations.'

Frolin Testifies That He Paid Protection to 4 Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 3.—More than 35 tons of one brand of yeast in bulk were sold to 14 Franklin County merchants in four years and a month, beginning in January, 1930, a Government witness testified today in the liquor conspiracy trial before a Federal jury here.

The witness was Fred O. Maier, of Washington, an official of a sales agency (Standard Brands), whose testimony that the annual consumption of yeast in Franklin County during the period was nine times that of Richmond, the capital city, with eight times the county's population, exclusive of that used in bakeries.

Maier was called as the last witness of the week in the trial of 23 defendants on a blanket indictment charging participation in a conspiracy in Franklin County to defraud the Government of internal revenue taxes on liquor. The trial has been in progress two weeks.

In addition to the 70,448 pounds of yeast in pound packages, which the witness said were distributed to the Franklin merchants, Maier said they were serviced with 7,370 yeast "pieces," which usually are sold for domestic consumption.

Maier said the Franklin County consumption of bulk yeast was greater than that of any similar territory in all of North Carolina and Virginia, and parts of Maryland and West Virginia, for which records are kept in his office.

The yeast testimony was introduced by Assistant District Attorney Frank S. Tavener, jr., as a part of the Government's effort to show that alleged far-reaching distillery operations existed in the county.

Sixty-one witnesses had been presented by the prosecution when the second week of the trial came to a close today, and the court was recessed until Monday.

Preceding Maier to the stand were Leonard Fralin, T. Frank Davis and H. J. Wright, who said they had been engaged in illicit operations in Franklin County more than five years.

Fralin and Wright said they were partners much of that time and Davis was with them, doing most of the actual work.

Fralin and Wright identified receipts from stores showing that they had paid "grain bills" amounting to more than $10,000 and said there might be more.

Both of them testified that they continually paid "granny fees" to raiding officers for the protection of their activities.

Davis testified that they told him the operations were protected, and that he felt secure from raids by county and State officers while he worked at the stills.

Fralin and Wright were shaken but little in their cross-examination. Under questions snapped at him by defense counsel, Davis admitted that he had been arrested by Federal officers and convicted in the Roanoke District Court on charges of violating prohibition laws, and that he had engaged in the manufacture of liquor while he was under "five years probation."

Davis was reluctant to talk about his illicit activities while he was "on probation," despite the fact the presiding judge, John Paul, told him in open court that his probation would not be revoked on account of his testimony.

Davis was listed in the indictment as a co-conspirator, and Fralin and Wright were among four who entered pleas of guilty to the conspiracy trial. Seven other individual and one corporation informed the court they would offer no defense.

In their direct testimony Fralin and Wright named a score of persons they said had worked either with them or for them in liquor operations. They named the officers to whom they said they paid protection money, and said on one occasion $50 had been left for Federal agents.

Soon after the court was opened today, Judge Paul took occasion to warn the 23 defendants that there was to be no more talking to "the Government's witnesses about this case."

Dual Murder Is Admitted By Suspects

Each Blames Other for Slaying of Farm Couple Month Ago.

Stories of Va. Tragedy Agree Except for Actual Killer.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 3.—Reciprocal accusations of being the actual murderer of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman on their Spotsylvania County farm last month were made in confessions which Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes said he gained today from John Shell and Joe Jackson, Negroes indicted for the crime.

The sheriff said both Shell and Jackson related circumstances of their maruding night visit to the Coleman home, and their stories coincided except that each named the other as the killer.

Bodies Thrown in Well.

The elderly couple was slain and their bodies stuffed into the well at their home.

Jackson presented himself to authorities at Fredericksburg shortly after the crime, saying he understood he was wanted for questioning. Shell was traced to New York and extradited. He was returned here Wednesday night and placed in Henrico County jail, where Jackson is being held.

Shell, Sheriff Blaydes said, declared he and Jackson went to the Coleman home and demanded money. As he waited in the yard, Shell is said to have related, Jackson reappeared at the door with a shotgun.

Shotgun Fired.

After returning from upstairs, where he had gone to search for money, Shell is reported to have told the sheriff, he found Mr. Coleman had been thrown down the well. Jackson, Shell charged, then threw Mrs. Coleman into the shaft and fired the shotgun down the well.

Coleman and his wife were killed because they recognized the robbers, the sheriff reported Shell as saying.

Jackson, Blaydes asserted, told the same story, but blamed Shell for the slayings.

The two men are to be tried for murder on May 14.

Highway Men Set Conference On Lee Route

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., May 3.—Discussion of plans of the Lee Highway Association for a 200-foot right-of-way from Washington to Bristol, with a 30-foot planting strip in the middle, will take place here next Monday in a conference between local highway enthusiasts and Dr. S. W. Johnson, general director of the association, and Dr. J. W. Laws, of El Paso, Tex.

Dr. Johnson, in a letter to Henry Roberts, of Bristol, past president of the Lee Highway Association, revealed that he and Mr. Laws, now in Washington, intend to visit Bristol next eek.

Traveling from Washington to Bristol over the Lee highway, they will hold conferences at towns en route. They will spend Friday night in Luray, will hold a conference at Staunton on Saturday and stop at Natural Tunnel Saturday night.

They will spend Sunday night in Marion, probably hold a breakfast conference there Monday morning, and proceed on to Bristol.

The dream of the association is to widen and beautify the Lee highway, first from Washington to Bristol, and later all the way to San Diego, Calif., into the world's most magnificent boulevard.

According to plans of the association, there will be two 20-foot pavements, each for one-way travel, making safe a speed that will bring Bristol, 395 miles away, within a few hours of the National Capital. Shrubbery would be planted in the 30-foot strip dividing the two pavements, not only beautifying the thoroughfare, but eliminating the glare of approaching headlights.

All railway grade crossings would be eliminated.

With the new relief works program now getting under way, leaders in the Lee Highway Association, it is understood, feel that the time is ripe to press their plans for the wide boulevard connecting Bristol and Washington.

In its course of 3,100 miles, the Lee highway traverses ten States, and is recognized as one of the Nation's most important routes. The Lee Highway Association expects to be the first continuously paved and dustless road across the continent.

Let us take a look at Willie today. His picture is below. Just look at him! He has just bid seven no-trump, and his partner is beaming because she knows that he will make it easily—and their opponents redoubled!

What wrought this marvelous change in Willie? What transformed him from just another dub into a master player, a man respected among men—and women? The answer is Ely Culbertson, and what he did for Willie Jones, he can do for you. Culbertson on Bridge is a regular feature of

School Tax Rate Boost In Waynesboro Forecast

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 3.—An increase of two mills in the school tax rate was predicted today for 1935-36. The board of education yesterday revealed that outstanding taxes for the last three years now total $80,000 in Waynesboro and unless a good portion of that amount is paid, the board will be forced to increase the rate from 16 to 18 mills.

In the last two years, the budget has been increased $10,000 due to the return of teachers' 10 per cent cuts effected four years ago.

"ROPE'S END." The Columbia Players present the drama in three acts by Patrick Hamilton, directed by Jane Lasater Rubey. Set designed by Mrs. Rubey and executed by Warren Head and G. DeWitt Miller. At Pierce Hall, May 1 and 2. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST:

Wyndham Brandon...Richard Kreutzburg
Charles Granillo.....Robert M. Miller
Abbott.....B. A. P. Doehrer
Kenneth Raglan.....George Edwards
Leila Arden.....Bunnie Skinner
Sir Johnstone Kentley..Wade Robinson
Mrs. Debenham.....Dorothy M. White
Rupert Cadell.....S. Allen Foster

Semi-porfessional drama during the past fortnight has staged some remarkable performances, and last evening and Wednesday the Columbia Players joined the parade, presenting Patrick Hamilton's three-act murder drama, "Rope's End." Normally the word, "mystery," should follow "murder" but here is a case where homicide serves alone to motivate an entire evening of fascinating dramaturgy.

Two Oxonians have planned and perpetrated a thrill murder which should, as usual, go down in history as the perfect crime. About a moment before the curtain rises they have stuffed the body into a chest, on which subesequently, to add to the egotistic gratification of accomplishment, a late supper is served to intimate associates of the deceased.

To that party come Kenneth Raglan and Leila Arden, representing youthful unsophistication; Sir John Kentley and Mrs. Debenham, father and aunt of the murdered boy, and Rupert Cadell, a poet disillusioned but not unmindful of the obligations which conventions and society demand.

From sundry things that are said, Cadell deduces that the idle jesting about a corpse in the chest is not all small talk to while away the time. From the actions of Charles Granillo and the knowledge of Wyndham Brandon's earlier idiosyncrasies, he arrives at the conclusion that these two have killed Ronald Kentley.

"Rope's End" is rich material for any company, and Columbia's cast was equal to any and all demands. As the "brains" of the thrill murder, Richard Kreutzburg gave an excellent performance and one which is quite at the top of his catalogue. As particeps criminis, Robert M. Miller was far above any previous work. Here, as the less emotionally stable of the malefactors, he was ideally cast.

S. Allen Foster, whose genuine English accent added tremendously to the effectiveness of the part, was the poet who claims his works are "the best I have ever read." Another excellent portrayal, this. With few words to speak, other than "——oh, yes," Dorothy White here got her big chance as the victim's aunt. Wade Robinson, Bunnie Skinner, George Edwards and B. A. P. Doehrer added their talents

Yachts, Paint, Tackle and Fun Lure the Stars

W. C. Fields Has Best Idea; Mechanical Detectives; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is Leicester Wagner who takes hold of the hot end of a United Press wire in Hollywood to communicate the following "signs of spring" to this department:

Clark Gable had the temerity to blossom out in a yellow polo shirt—most inexcusable of all articles of male attire, unless one really is going to play polo!—and Nick Foran, the singing athlete, achieved a nicely toasted nose while yachting.

Will Rogers set up one of those almost extinct symbols of the tobacconists, a fine, old, cigar-store wooden Indian, at his front gate, the gift of an admirer, and Dick Powell started looking for a ranch. Could that cigar-store Indian have been inspired by the fact that Mr. Rogers stems from the Cherokees, or the Choctaws, or some such tribe, and how come that Mr. Powell has any trouble finding a ranch right out there where they grow

W. C. Fields opened a keg of bock, bless his heart, and Lee Tracy acquired the urge to travel.

They Open and Close.

Fred MacMurray, with May Robson in "Grand Old Girl" and with Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily," manufactured himself an additional 150 or so trout flies, and Guy Kibbee, here in person the week Maxine Doyle appeared with the Paul Ash revue at the Earle, sulked because he had to work on the day the fishing season opened.

Carl Brisson opened negotiations for a yacht and the circus closed its winter quarters.

Merle Oberon and David Niven admitted it was love and there was an item about Mr. and Mrs. Adolphe Menjou (Veree Teasdale) that we shall leave to the specialized talents of Mr. Winchell.

The blessed event is expected in October, a very elegant month, take it from one who was born on the twenty-seventh of it, along with Theodore Roosevelt, 'Bill" Seltzer, former foreman of the composing room of this estimable family journal: Kathryn Givney, recently of the National Theater Players, and a considerable number of other "Scorpios" that might be named.

So spring is here, although, locally, I should say that we are enjoying a very poor imitation of the real thing.

It is always interesting to contemplate the great number of motion picture celebrities the producers find it possible to pack into one of their releases of the perennially popular "Screen Snapshots." In the issue currently being shown on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater as one of the short-reel complements of "The Bride of Frankenstein," there are visible, among others, Gloria Swanson, looking as radiant as she did back in the old days of the Mack Sennett bathing-girl comedies; Herbert Marshall, Joan Marsh, Isabel Jewell, Evelyn Venable, Hal Moore, whoever he is; the wrestler, Big Chief Little Wolf, Jack Holt and Ralph Bellamy; Lee Tracy, Harold Lloyd, Helen Morgan, Hugh Williams, Donald Cook, Jean Muir, Jim Cagney, Boris Karloff, starred on the same screen in the Universal "shocker" hereinabove referred to; Mary Pickford, Richard Cromwell, Ben and Bebe (Daniels) Lyon and daughter, Barbara ("Babs"); Skeets Gallagher, Arline Judge, Shirley Mason, Joe E. Brown, Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, Virginia Pine, Benny Rubin and the small sons and daughters of all these players who have small sons and daughters—which seems to be a considerable number.

Worth seeing, if you ask me—or even if you don't!

Punishment Fits Crime!

Somewhere back there we mentioned the name of Jimmy Cagney. And that reminds me.

Master Cagney has discovered that the business of being a "G Man," the underworld patois for a Department of Justice agent, is not so simple as it appears upon the surface. In preparing for what is described as one of the most engrossing pictures since his sensational "Public Enemy," Jimmy found himself up against an intricate and a complicated system.

The early sequences of the play deal with the training through which rookies must go for a six-month period before they can become qualified "G-Men." The first day Cagney appeared on the set, he was turned over to Frank Gompert, head of the criminological laboratory of the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, who acted as technical director of the picture. What Mr. Cagney learned from Mr. Gompert, one suspects, was plenty.

Conviction by Machinery.

For example, Mr. Cagney was introduced to the uncanny proficiency of the "selector machine" in the Los Angeles branch of the Bureau of Investigation—United States Department of Justice. This is a waist-high gadget paralleling the wall that sifts out the identification cards of known crooks who work only between certain hours of the day or night—say, between midnight and 2 a. m. Feeding the burglar file into one end of the machine, the officer of the law soon has a complete roster of probable suspects for the given crime.

Besides that, there was the comparator, a box-like contraption, which, with its bright lights and magnifiers, makes an unimpeachable comparison of fingerprints in one-fiftieth the time it used to take by methods now obsolete.

Much of the equipment of the Department of Justice was loaned to the Warners to insure the accuracy and realism of "G-Men." It comes to the Earle on May 10.

Speaking of the Earle, as we more or less seem to be at the moment, Herb Cook and His Three Little Words—Beth Raborn, Joan Jarrett and Frances Joy—will not be on the bill at the Earle for the week beginning today, on account of because Gus Arnheim's orchestra and revue provide so complete an entertainment that there is no spot where they can be placed. So Herb and the girls will play the New Theater in Staunton, Va., tonight and tomorrow night, with a jump to Lexington, Va., for a midnight show tomorrow night.

They will return to Washington Sunday night for a benefit at the Jewish Community Center, if I have my memory on straight, and Monday will do their usual broadcast over WJSV.

Audrey Sieber, the swelte, if that is what I mean, mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, also will be absent from the scene for another week, although she returned to town from New York days ago and is eagerly awaiting the day when she will be out behind those footlights again.

Now, don't tell me she is still show-shopping along Broadway, because she was a welcome visitor at this desk day before yistiddy.

Fathers and Sons.

When the Washington Hebrew congregation gives its annual "father and son" banquet in the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday night, May 29, Sidney B. Lust, prominent motion picture producer and distributor of Washington and surrounding territory, will be chairman of the arrangements committee.

Sid plans an extremely ample evening for the sons and their dads. Clark Griffith and a considerable number of the Nationals will be present, there will be a pretentious vaudeville show, Arch MacDonald, radio sports announcer, will make a talk; writers in various fields will be on hand, Jim McNamara, physical director of the J. C. C., will stage some sizzling bouts and altogether the occasion should be a memorable one, especially in the minds of impressionable youth.

Would it be asking too much to borrow your son for the evening?

Gertrude Niesen, who closed a headline engagement on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater last night, declined a 7-week engagement, but accepted a 5-week booking, with Larry Schwab, formerly half of the producing firm of Schwab & Mandell, at the Municipal Opera House in St. Louis, to begin June 24. Gertrude will be heard in five musical comedies—"Roberta," "Good News," "The Vagabond King," "Sunny" and probably "Rio Rita."

In case you have forgotten last summer's report on this fascinating young artiste, she will be 22 on July 8, and was born on an ocean liner bound for America 5 days out of Southampton, England. Her debut on the professional stage was made only 2½ years ago, when she played the Paramount Theater in Brooklyn, N. Y., with Charlie Davis and his band.

It is one of her inexplicable idiosyncrasies that she is always tardy for her stage appearances. Once out in Chicago, when she was singing with Phil Spitalny's band, her lateness on stage almost resulted in her being cut in two by the mechanical widgets controlling a perambulating bandstand. And still she doesn't get down on time! What to do with a gal like that?

Benefit Matinee.

The Children's Studio of Speech and Dramatic Art, under the direction of Rose Robison Cohen, will present "Racketty-Packetty House," a child classic by Frances Hodgson Burnett, in a prologue and three acts, at a benefit performance in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, on Saturday, May 11, at 2:30 p. m. The entire proceeds of the performance will be devoted to the needs of destitute children in the District.

Costumes for the play, which are of the Victorian period, have been designed by Miss Florence Chambers, of the District Playgrounds, who is also supervising the scenery which the students are painting.

The cast will include Phyllis Frank, Vivian James, Barbara Lichtenstein, Miriam Shapiro, Marilyn Sirota, Elsie Russell, Marianne Lichtenstein, Shirley Dinowitzer, Claire Sugar, Betty Hall, Evelyn Cohen, Doris Sirota, Mary Jo Hall, Doris Goldberg, Gloria Jacobi, Meurice Cohen, Hardie Meakin 2d, Teddy Bialek, Martin Cohen, Joseph Floria and Bobby Sloan.

Ushers, dressed in period costumes, will be Constance Ruth Snow, Zelda Diamond, Marilyn Shapiro, Phyllis Rands.

Elsa Lanchester, in case you have been wondering, was born in London, England, and became famous on the revue stage as the "feminine Charlie Chaplin." Miss Lanchester, in private life, as you have been told repeatedly, is Mrs. Charles Laughton, with whom she made her first screen success in the role of Ann of Cleves, "The Flanders Mare," in "The Private Life of Henry VIII." Miss Lanchester, incidentally, will be reasonably prevalent on the local screen come today. She is cast in the title role of "The Bride of Frankenstein," at RKO-Keith's, and this morning will be seen as the Governor's wife in the superb filmization of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," in which she importantly supports Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy and appears as the consort of Frank Morgan, inimitably nonplussed and bewildered throughout the action of the picture—Mr. Morgan, that is, not Mrs. Laughton.

A Few Reflections.

Press dispatches from Hollywood tell us that Mae West's newly decorated apartment suite includes a full-length mirror placed in the ceiling directly above her head, when she is standing under it! There are mirrors in every door, on every wall, everywhere, all over the place, to create the illusion of an Amazon army of Mae Wests.

Cautious Question Note.

Did you hear the one about Mae's chicken farm?

Look out, there's a lady over there!

Beauties of Screen and Stage

Mr. Kennedy died in 1843. His first wife, Jane Herron Kennedy, died in 1803, and his second, Mary Davidson Kennedy, in 1845.

Convict Steals Truck, Escapes Into Woods

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., May 3.—Hugh Cox, a young colored convict, escaped in a truck from the State highway camp two miles east of Front Royal today. It was reported tonight that he abandoned the truck at Chantilly, west of Fairfax, and is concealed in a nearby woods. Officers have surrounded the woods and have sent out a call for additional men.

Cox jumped into the truck, which is owned by J. W. Groves of Cedarville, near Front Royal, and headed toward Washington. He has 14 more years to serve.

Actions of Hitler Belie Peace Talk, Editor Says

Dabney, who returned a year ago from a tour of Europe, told the International Relations Clubs of Virginia that "a large percentage of the Germans are strongly opposed to the Nazi regime."

Record 70,000 to See 61st Derby Today; Track May Be Fast

18 Expected To Start in Classic

Nellie Flag and Today Rated Co-Favorites; Close Race Seen.

Oval Is Muddy Now, but May Dry Out; Post Time Is 5:45.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

LOUISVILLE, May 3.—Having demonstrated its capacity to survive fire or flood, good times or bad, America's most spectacular horse race will be run off tomorrow on the storm-tossed crest of a wave of carnival enthusiasm.

Converging on the racing capital of the Bluegrass country by land, river and air, the gathering of the clans was of such proportions by tonight that a record outpouring of 70,000 spectators was anticipated for the sixty-first Kentucky Derby at picturesque Churchill Downs.

The famous track was hock-deep in mud today after a series of terrific thunderstorms, but it escaped damage from the wind and lightning which left a trail of wreckage elsewhere in the vicinity. Clearing skies today greeted the gathering throngs and forecast the likelihood of a good track, even if a trifle heavy, by Derby post time, approximately 5:45 p. m. (Washington time).

22 Horses Named.

Twenty-two 3-year-olds, including the crack filly, Nellie Flag, co-favorite for the big race with Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's colt, Today, have been named for the test of speed, courage and stamina over the route of 1¼ miles. Opposing thoroughbred lines are sharply drawn for another dramatic racing duel between favorites of the East and West, with indications pointing to a wide-open stretch battle and one of the closest finishes in years.

With $40,000 added, the Derby will have a gross value of $56,550, if all entries go to the post, and be worth $46,125 net to the winner. The expectation, however, is that no more than 17 or 18 will respond to the bugle call and parade past the packed stands to the time-honored strains of "My Old Kentucky Home."

Few Entry Surprises.

There were few surprises when the Derby entries were dropped in the box this morning. Warren Wright, Chicago sportsman, nominated Calumet Dick, a son of Gallant Fox, as a running mate for the highly-regarded Nellie Flag, but the colt is not likely to go to the barrier. Jouett Shouse's Weston, J. J. Flanigan's Chanceview and T. C. Worden's Prince Splendor were regarded as other doubtful starters.

Omaha, the gangling son of Gallant Fox, and Big Hope of the Belair Stud, owned by William Woodward, of New York, got somewhat the worst of the draw for positions. Omaha drew No. 11, outside of Nellie Flag, but the Eastern colt is a bad starter and likely to get tangled up if there's an early jam, whereas the filly has the starting speed to work clear of interference.

Today, which showed a keen edge in breezing a half mile through the sloppy going this morning in 47 2-5 seconds, also has plenty of early foot and should not be handicapped by starting from No. 19 position. Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Commonwealth is next to the Brandon Stable's Tutticurio, on the extreme outside. The rail position was drawn by E. D. Shaffer's long shot, St. Bernard, with Roman Soldier No. 3.

Air, Land, Water Travel Lanes Packed; Storm Clouds Clear.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, May 3.—Thousands of Kentucky Derby-bound fans crowded the air, land and water travel lanes toward Louisville tonight on the eve of the sixty-first running of the turf classic.

By post time tomorrow the throng is expected to reach 100,000. This record attendance was predicted by Col. Matt J. Winn, executive director of Churchill Downs.

The vanguard arriving today found the city perking up after a severe wind and electrical storm which swept through Louisville and other parts of Kentucky last night and early today.

Storm Clouds Clear.

The storm clouds cleared during the day, however, and the city's Derby festival trappings were resplendent again in the sunshine. The main business district and Churchill Downs in South Louisville escaped the worst of the storm.

Among the early arrivals were hundreds of Gov. Ruby Laffoon's honorary colonels from distant parts of the Nation. The mint juleps clinked merrily tonight at their pre-Derby banquet in honor of the Governor.

Some out-of-State colonels were disillusioned today, however, as to the perquisities of their titles. H. H. Holeman, the Governor's secretary, was kept busy answering, telling colonels that free tickets to the Derby did not go with the commissions.

All Modes of Travel.

The influx of visitors came by special trains and buses, private automobiles and river boats, and some afoot.

Millionaires in their special trains rolled into the railroad yards and the usual quota of hoboes came on the "rods." Airplane arrivals increased as the weather cleared.

Two special trains came from Memphis, Tenn. The Elks Club special carried 168 passengers and the Rex Club train brought 68. In addition, 162 passengers arrived from Memphis in six extra coaches on the regular train this morning. About 220 persons came from Chicago on a special train. A special from Detroit brought a party of 100.

Two From New York.

Two special trains arrived from New York at noon and the regularly scheduled trains arriving during the day from the East carried additional coaches.

Col. Henry W. Rogers, superintendent of Bowman Field, estimated that 100 Army and private planes would use the field during the week-end.

The Tom Green packet steamer churned down the Ohio River tonight with a boat load of passengers from Cincinnati. The steamer will dock here early tomorrow.

To protect the paying customers, Adjt. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt assigned 500 Kentucky National Guardsmen to the Downs. They will be on duty all day tomorrow assisting the track management in repelling gate and fence crashers.

Derby Remains the Big Race, Despite Bids of Other Tracks

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, May 3.—Tomorrow is play day for the aristocrats.

As in olden days, the commoners are allowed to play along, but at their distance and penned in the proper inclosures. Horse racing is called the sport of kings. Money is king in this country Money is at play here, then, tommorw when the sixty-first running of the famous Kentucky Derby takes place.

I have often wondered why it was such a famous race, what one thing more than anything else had put it over. The answer seems to lie in the astute guess of a Southern party by the name of Col. Matt Winn. The colonel many years ago played social and money politics. The royalty of the country, the big money kings and their society queens, all the little petty money dukes and barons and counts and knights, according to their fortunes and their social position, that follow in their wake, came to Kentucky to race their 3-year-olds on Derby Day. And the race was made. It became famous. The middle class and the common people followed in the wake of royalty. When royalty made the Kentucky Derby its own, the people followed suit.

And so you can run your Belmonts and your Santa Anitas and your Agua Calientas, and all your other big stake races, but the big race will still be the Kentucky Derby. The money value of this classic run has shrunk, compared to the newer ones, but the show is 61 years old now, and two generations of the royal families of the country have patronized it. It has finally become sport to win the Kentucky Derby. And all the great royal names of racing are still trying.

Theirs is the sport, theirs are the horses (with an occasional outsider, a Money-Pretender, or Robber Baron not yet turned square). We hang around the fringes of it like camp followers, play our own measly little bourgeoise games at $2, and $5, wave our hats and yell for the winner, and, by proxy, for the royal owner. It's good fun, interesting and exciting, but we no more forget our places or are permitted to

Today Is First In Handicap Ratings

Omaha Second, Nellie Flag Third; 12 Horses Are Thrown in Field.

LOUISVILLE, May 3.—Today, C. V. Whitney's fleet Derby contender, was selected today by Erwin Weidekamp, track handicapper, from the field of 22 probable starters as the "number naught" horse for the sixty-first running tomorrow of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. The handicapper's first choice drew No. 19 post position, with R. Workman aboard.

Omaha, in eleventh post position, was rated second by the handicapper and the Calumet Farm entry, Nellie Flag, favored filly, and Calumet Dick, third. Nellie Flag drew post position 10 and her stablemate position No. 4.

Other rating of the handicapper were, fourth, Boxthorn; fifth, Plat Eye; sixth, Commonwealth; seventh, Psychic Bid; eighth, Sun Fair Play, and ninth, Roman Soldier.

Others in Field.

The remaining 12 horses were thrown in the "field." With the post positions, they include: St. Bernard, Whiskolo, Whopper, Tutticurio, Morpluck, Blackbirder, Chanceview, Weston, Color Bearer, Prince Splendor, Bluebeard and McCarthy.

Owners have up until 45 minutes before post time for last-minute scratches and Handicapper Weidekamp reserved the right to move up "field horses" to replace any of his first nine selections withdrawn. He announced that St. Bernard would get the first call from the field, and Whiskolo the second call in the event of scratches.

20,000 Will See Cup Races in Virginia

Fair Weather Is Promised for 14th Running of Program Today.

By Bill McCormick.

WITH the entire country horse conscious on Derby Day, the attention of steeplechase fanciers will be focused on the running of the Virginia Gold Cup races on the Broadview estate of Alexander B. Hagner, near Warrenton, this afternoon.

The fourteenth running of the classic program has drawn rather small, but undeniably select fields for every race. The Virginia Gold Cup, the fixture which will feature the day dedicated to hedge hopping and timber topping, has drawn a field of nine, headed by Paul Mellon's sensational Chatterplay and the Northwood Stables' slightly less sensational Indigo.

The Gold Cup race—a 4-mile affair—will be run over the heart-breaking timber course, whose jumps are from 3 feet 8 inches to 4 feet 2 inches high. Nineteen such jumps, or twice around the layout, will complete the distance for the race.

Grand National.

Vying for the spotlight on the program will be the inaugural of the Virginia Grand National, a 2½-mile race over brush. The brush is brand new, as is the timber, and is a very difficult although well-conceived affair. The hedge is from 5 feet to 5 feet 8 inches in height.

The two open ditch jumps on the brush course are almost exact duplicates of the Liverpools on the English Grand National. They are fronted by ditches 6 feet wide and 3 feet deep. Brush on these jumps is trimmed at 5 feet 8 inches and a 14-foot leap from take-off to landing is required to clear.

The new layout of both brush and timber has been carefully planned to afford spectators a clear view of all contestants at all times. The entire course is clearly visible from a high plateau in the center or from a hill which fronts the Hagner residence.

Fair Weather Forecast.

Intermittent rains in Warrenton yesterday served to settle the dust on the hilly course which drains rapidly because of its hilliness and is expected to be lightning fast for the races. The Weather Bureau had predicted fair weather for the Warrenton territory today.

The first race, the Virginia Grand National, is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. Hotels, inns and boarding houses as well as private homes were filling rapidly last night. A crowd of 20,000 is expected and parking accommodations for more than 10,000 automobiles have been provided. The automobile traffic will be fed into the course on two roads to prevent traffic jams.

The course may be reached from

Rain, Cold Nip Nats-Chisox Opener

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The Nats preserved their one-game winning streak today. They are still unbeaten by a Western club. In fact, they haven't played a Western club. Today's scheduled game with the White Sox was frozen out by one of Lake Michigan's choicest Northeasterns which drove a slanting rain before it.

Thus relieved of the ball game, the bulk of the Nats made a polar dash to the nearby Aurora Race Track where they lost a decision to the ponies by seven runs.

The cold here has jeopardized the entire three-game series which is schduled to run through the week-end. With the White Sox proving a drawing card here, for the first time in years, the Washington management is scanning the weather charts in the hope of getting in the Saturday and Sunday games.

Hoping to Recoup.

Disappointed by poor attendance in New York, where only 10,000 saw the three games with the Yankees, Washington club officials hope to recoup some profit in the week-end games here. As evidence of the manner in which the surprising White Sox are showing at the gate, there was last Sunday's crowd of 25,000 which turned out to see them play the lowly Browns.

Manager Bucky Harris has Bump Hadley in readiness for the first game of the series. The big right-hander pitched seven impressive innings in Boston in his last outing and has had five days rest.

In a long distance telephone conversation with Owner Clark Griffith, Bucky Harris again made an appeal for the purchase of another pitcher.

The first 14 games of the season have increased Harris' pennant hopes, with pitching the lone disturbing factor. Despite the evidence that Monte Weaver is returning to form, Harris is looking to the double-headers of the future with some alarm.

He has been gratified, however, by the club's hitting, particularly the manner in which they rallied against the Yankees in the late innings. And he is not only content to continue with Cliff Bolton as his No. 1 catcher and Jake Powell as his center-fielder, but he is extremely pleased with their performances.

Dodgers Down Pirates, 2-1; Weaver Weakens

New Virginia Set-up Seen Futile

Fenwick Feels Material and School's Policies Must Be Blamed.

Opposes Taking Voice in Athletics Away From Students, Alumni.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SERIOUS doubt that the University of Virginia has found a curative medicine for its athletic ills in the new policies and executive set-up announced Thursday by President John Lloyd Newcomb, was expressed yesterday by Charles R. Fenwick, prominent alumnus and patent attorney of this city.

Fenwick was loath to believe that the system was the source of the University's troubles, and consequently thought that the installation of a new governing body is, more or less, a quack remedy, or futile gesture.

Praises Pritchett.

Concerning Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, who will assume office as director of the new department of athletics and physical education in September, Fenwick had only praise for his executive ability and gentlemanly character. The two are warm friends.

"I think the source of difficulties might be traced to material, or to the school's athletic policies rather than the system by which sports are conducted," Fenwick said. "I'm not particularly in favor of the new arrangement. There is a danger of overorganization, of becoming top-heavy under the system, and it certainly will not function properly unless there is a strong degree of co-operation among the departments."

Student Leadership.

Fenwick pointed out that it is necessary to build up student leadership to strengthen the morale which has been seriously undermined in recent years because of the low caliber of athletic teams. He didn't feel that the new system would produce this effect, pointing out that it deprives both students and alumni of voice in athletics.

From experience gained while serving as assistant football coach at the University of Maryland, Fenwick stated he is inclined to the opinion that the Old Line school has a more desirable arrangement than the one the Cavaliers will experiment with. He is an exponent of the theory that it is a good policy to have coaches of varsity teams directing intra-mural sports. This prevents the get-up from becoming topheavy.

To Be Run Separately.

At Virginia, beginning next autumn, the intra-mural, inter-collegiate and physical education branches will be conducted separately, with no interlocking connections.

Three members of the alumni who will serve in an advisory capacity probably will be selected at the June meeting of the alumni board to be held at Charlottesville. In all probability Fenwick will be one of the three. He intimated that the system will be given a fair trial after which, if it fails, the alumni will begin firing.

Given Free Hand.

Charlottesville, Va., May 3 (AP).—Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, of Davidson College, whose appointment as director of athletics at the University of Virginia was announced last night, will be given a free hand in organization of the new department next fall, it was reliably learned here today.

Capt. Pritchett, who has been director of athletics at Davidson and

Daily Double Pays Total Of $259

Tight Wad and Aroused Score in First, Third Races.

By the Associated Press.

PIMLICO, May 3.—Showing his notorious mud-running ability, Star Porter atoned for his defeat in the Baltimore Spring Handicap here the opening day, when he soundly trounced four other sprinters under the silks of R. Parr to account for the six furlongs of the Eutaw, an allowance affair that served as the principal attraction at Pimlico this afternoon.

Handled by Maurice Peters, who led the list of winning riders last season, Star Porter showed a brilliant performance over a track fetlock deep in mud and made every post a winning one to register his success by six lengths.

Going to the front with the rise of the barrier, Star Porter stepped out two lengths before Evergold and for the first five furlongs went along under a steadying pull. Shaken up when reaching the homestretch to make certain of victory, the Parr performer soon widened his lead and at the end was only galloping, much to the delight of a brave crowd that installed the colt a strong choice.

Long Shots Triumph.

Racing conditions were hardly suitable for racing, but a large crowd accepted the sport at the Hilltop course after rain visited the course during the night and through most of the afternoon. Favorites went down to defeat in most of the events listed, while many withdrawals were made to reduce the starters in the various numbers that were mostly under claiming conditions.

Jockey J. Gilbert was astride his second winner of the afternoon when he drove Chartres, a strongly supported choice, to victory in the mile and 70 yard seventh race.

Tight Wad, second choice in the wagering, earned brackets in the initial offering of the afternoon when he proved best on a track fetlock deep in mud to account for his success in a drive under the handling of R. Wimmer. Coming from a trailing position to pick up the leaders in steady fashion, the W. A. Jones performer lasted to earn a neck verdict over Bungalow, a rank outsider in the limit field. Third went to Canimar, the disappointing choice. Tight Wad paid $8.90.

Lord Johnson Wins.

Lord Johnson, favoring the slushy footing that prevailed on the jumping course, easily proved his superiority over six other jumpers in the decision of the Garry Owen Steeplechase, a gallop of 2 miles, for which he received the bulk of support.

Two-year-olds of the better grade were engaged for the 4½ furlongs of the Emerson, listed as the third event, and another surprise took place when Aroused, beaten in his two previous starts, carried the silks of the Howe Stable to a driving victory over the well-played Sandy Mack.

Prince Georges Tilts Are Delayed by Rain

Play in both the Hyattsville-Maryland Park High and Mount Rainier-Laurel High games was halted yesterday by rain before completion of five innings.

Maryland Park was leading Hyattsville, 9 to 1, at Hyattsville, when a downpour stopped play just one out short of the end of the fifth inning. At Laurel, Mount Rainier was trailing the home team by 2-to-0 in the fourth inning, when rain halted the game.

Rudy Dusek, Zaharias To Head Mat Program

After three years of effort, Promoter Joe Turner has finally arranged a match between the two outstanding "villains" of the rassle racket—Rudy Dusek and George Zaharias.

Setting the customers wild with a bruising draw several years ago, these ruffians have been sought time and again. The battle will be the main event on next Thursday's card at the Washington Auditorium.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIGHT WAD, $8.90, $5.20, $3.40; BUNGALOW, $36.70, $17.10; CANIMAR, $3.10.

TIGHT WAD, at home in the going but outrun for the first six furlongs, bettered his position willingly, wore down DALMATIA, but had to be strongly urged, to stall off BUNGALOW. The latter challenged stoutly in the last half-mile and finished in determined fashion. CANIMAR, away very slowly and far back in the early racing, finished with a tremendous rush and was probably best. DALMATIA had a lot taken out of her racing POOP DECK into submission and she faltered in the final drive. ROLLICK went evenly. JIM BROWN lost ground throughout. COLORIST weakened. POOP DECK stopped. HARD CHASE had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—Two miles; steeplechase. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:51. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Clark's b. g. (a), by Sir Johnson—Order of the Star. Trained by J. Healy. Value to winner, $750; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 3:37 3-5 (13 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LORD JOHNSON, $4.20, $2.90, $2.50; SID, $3.50, $3.50; DOCK LIGHT, $4.00.

LORD JOHNSON reserved off the pace for the first mile, drew on even terms with SID going to the tenth fence, assumed command after clearing the twelfth jump, then held sway to the end. SID went forwardly from the beginning, wore ARIES down, but could not stay with the winner after being challenged. DOCK LIGHT gained steadily in the last half mile and took third when ARIES made a bad landing at the last jump. ARIES went well for the first mile and then began tiring. SORMATT was held safe. STARBORN could not menace. GOLD SWEEPER was badly ridden for the entire trip.

THIRD RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:27½. Winner, Howe Stable's ch. c. (2), by Stimulus—Emma Helen. Trained by F. M. Walker. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 0:55 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AROUSED, $14.50, $5.60, $2.90; †SANDY MACK, $3.30, $2.20; CONQUER, $3.00.

AROUSED, going in his best form, assumed command immediately, shook off PROSY, then responded strongly for the final drive to resist SANDY MACK. The latter bettered his position on the outside, challenged strongly midway of the home stretch, and fought it out stoutly. CONQUER, permitted to drop back after leaving the back stretch, came between horses in the stretch drive and finished courageously. HIATUS lacked early speed, then came wide when moving up. SPANK finished stoutly on the inside. CANROCK had early speed. HIGH SANTA weakened, as did PROSY.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $259.70.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, MUDDY.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:00½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANISH FEAR, $19.00, $5.70, $3.80; ST. MORITZ, $2.70, $2.40; CHIRAC, $3.90.

BANISH FEAR, outrun for the first five furlongs, slipped through on the inside when the leaders went wide into the home stretch, then closed full of run to get up in the last sixteenth. ST. MORITZ circled his field to engage the leaders, but could not stall off the winner after displacing CHIRAC. The latter went strongly from the beginning and held on gamely in the closing strides. DANCING DOLL raced JIM CRAWFORD into submission, sprinted clear, but stopped badly after reaching the home stretch. JIM CRAWFORD weakened after showing nice speed for a half-mile.

FIFTH RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:28. Off at 4:33½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARVER, $24.40, $9.50, $6.50; FLAG RAISING, $12.70, $6.80; JAY JAY, $3.50.

CARVER, showing good ability in the footing and going improved, gained a forward position in the early running, swung wide into the home stretch, but closed stoutly and was up in the closing strides. FLAG RAISING improved her position fast and came with a strong rush after reaching the home stretch. JAY JAY, away in a tangle, reached contention swiftly, then closed in resolute fashion when clear. COME HOME raced SHYNO into submission, saved ground, and held on well. JUSTA FLIGHT made up considerable ground while going wide. SHYNO tired in the closing test. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:07½. Winner, A. Pearl's ch. g. (5), by The Porter—Starella. Trained by E. Trueman. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $3.40, $2.50, $2.10; EVERGOLD, $3.30, $2.40; LADFIELD, $2.50.

STAR PORTER, suited by the footing, sprinted into an easy lead, was shaken up after reaching the home stretch, then drew out rapidly. EVERGOLD, closer up than usual, made the final stretch a game. LADFIELD was taken wide for the entire trip. WAR STRIPES weakened steadily after a half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:36. Off at once. Winner, M. Jones' b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHARTRES, $5.80, $3.90, $2.90; FOUR SPOT, $4.60, $3.30; MY BOSS, $4.20.

CHARTRES, handling his weight smoothly, went into an easy lead midway of the back stretch, opened up at will, and had much in reserve at the end. FOUR SPOT lost ground at the first turn, secured racing room between his field when reaching the final turn, responded to punishment and barely lasted to stall off MY BOSS. The latter, steadily handled, slipped through on the inside after dropping back to last position and finished resolutely. MANAGER BILL raced prominently and held on well after losing considerable ground. DUNBAR weakened after making his run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:06. Off at 6:08. Winner, Mrs. K. Basehore's ch. g. CALORIC, unable to hold command after outrunning her field into the back stretch, continued stoutly when urged, saved ground when reaching the home stretch, then closed stoutly under punishment to get up in the closing strides. STANDOUT, rated prominently, took command with a rush entering the home stretch, but weakened suddenly approaching the finish. TRISTRAP went stoutly from the beginning and held on with good courage in the final issue. VOLGADALE could not threaten. INFILEE was never a factor. GENERAL LEJEUNE stopped badly after taking command without effort. WAHOO broke down after reaching the back stretch.

Roosevelt Upsets Central, Pounding Out 11-to-3 Series Victory

Joe Bovello Gives Only Six Hits

By John R. Vosburgh.

SOME natural-born ball players from Roosevelt High who rattle off base-hits in six-shooter fashion wrote a sparkling page in the high school athletic ledger yesterday as they battered the pride of Central High's pitching staff, Brick Hayes and Lefty Rowles, all over the Eastern High field to walk off with an 11-to-3 victory over the team favored to win the 1935 championship.

One of the biggest upsets in recent inter-high history, the triumph gave the race for the Clark Griffith trophy, now held by Eastern, a new complexion, with Roosevelt, and no longer Central, now standing as "the team to beat" for the title. The Ruff Riders bounced into a tie with Tech for the league leadership, the Maroon having defeated Western Tuesday.

But if the hitting talents of the rollicking Ruff Riders provided some staccato punctuation to the little chapter they contributed, it was the good right arm of sunny-faced Joe Bovello which wrote the body of the story. The happy-go-lucky, apple-cheeked youngster set the highly rated Light Blue line-up back with 6 hits, pitching a no-hit, no-run game for the first five innings.

Halted Temporarily.

A shower in the fourth inning for a while threatened the Roosevelt victory but after a 20-minute wait the game was resumed, most of the latter part of which was played in a steady drizzle. Central was playing without its regular catcher, Don Dunlap, who was out of the city, but the way the Roosevelt boys were playing, afield and at bat, it would have needed more than one man to stop them.

Roosevelt had given an indication of its hitting power when it beat Alexandria with 14 hits and garnered 14 hits Wednesday off the Maryland freshmen pitchers, but it had hardly been expected to batter the Central veterans for 15 bingles. The attack did not begin until the third inning, when Jimmy Weber, Roosevelt right fielder, doubled, George Coakley singled and a pass to Bovello, an infield out and a single by Bailey combined to score three runs.

An error on a grounder by Ey, by Joe Moran, Central third-sacker, started the next Roosevelt offensive. Bill Woodward followed with a single and Weber was safe when the Blue infield failed to nail Ey at third. Coach Jack Ray replaced Hayes with Rowles, and Hayes replaced Mike George behind the bat.

Boosts Score to 6-0.

George Coakley singled scoring two runs and two walks and an infield out added another to make it 6 to 0. In the meantime, Central was finding Bovello a puzzle, either popping up or grounding out.

With two out in the sixth Bovello started another scoring splurge when he singled off Moran's glove. Neely, Bailey and Lewis singled sharply in a row and three more runs crossed the plate. A single by Shorty Chumbris and a double by Angelo Valenza gave Central its first run in the seventh and a walk, a hit-batsman and a single by Moran added the other two in the ninth. A home run to left field by Jack Neely, Roosevelt third baseman, with Bovello on first netted two more for Roosevelt in the eighth.

who is well known here because of his former coaching position at Woodberry Forest, is expected to reach here early this summer to formulate detailed plans for the new three-division department.

His predecessor, James G. Driver, who has been director of athletics at Virginia for the last six years, most probably will be retained in an advisory capacity for a time, if he so desires. No official announcement has been made concerning this, as well as the report that the present coaching staff will be held intact throughout the start of the 1935-36 session.

Barney Welsh, Bidwell Win In Doubles

THE opening day's play of the annual Chevy Chase Club invitation doubles tournament was cut short by rain yesterday afternoon, but not until Barney Welsh, District and National Public Parks champion, had advanced to the quarter-finals with his partner, Ray Bidwell, of Boston.

Obviously approaching the peak of his game again after the winter's lay-off, Welsh was hitting out savagely as he and his teammate set back Tom Sturgis, of New York, and Tom Moorhead, of Washington, 6—3, 6—0, in a morning match. They will play Stewart Young and George Bodman, of Seabright, N. J., at 11:30 a. m. today.

Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, ranking amateur team of the world, who are expected to win the tournament without a great deal of difficulty, were held inactive yesterday but will play Lawrence A. Baker and J. Dixon, both former Davis Cup captains, in this morning's feature match.

Tom Mangan, veteran Columbia Country Club stylist, and Hugh Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, will play Morgan and Karrick a first-round match postponed from yesterday.

In other matches yesterday, Stewart Young and George Bodman, of Seabright N. J., defeated Tom Beardsley and George Roberts, of New York, 6—2, 6—8, 6—2; Cedric Major and Ned Hearndon, of New York, third seeded team, won from Tinsley Garnett and Jim Karrich, of Washington, 6—1, 6—1, and John Cole, of New York, and Stanley Carr, of Washington, eliminated Dwight Davis, donor of the Davis Cup, and Julian Myrick, of New York, former president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Louisville Gay On Eve of Derby showed that 22 horses were named for the struggle of a mile and a quarter.

The group that the turf experts have determined as the "big six" of this Derby is intact. They are C. V. Whitney's Today, the Calumet Farm's Nellie Flag, coupled with Calumet Dick; the Greentree Stable's Plat Eye, Mrs. Walter Jeffords' Commonwealth, Col. E. R. Bradley's Boxthorn and the Belair Stud's Omaha. It is the consensus in the press box that the winner will be from this group.

It was predicted tonight that not more than 18 horses would answer the bugle call, but just which ones will be scratched could not be determined. Phil Reuter's Roman Soldier, the Brookmeade Stable's Psychic Bid and Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Fairplay were the only others to be assigned betting positions.

Grouped in the mutuel field are 12 horses and it is from among these that scratches, if any, will come. These horses are E. D. Shafer's St. Bernard, H. P. Headley's Whopper, Morris & Keating's McCarthy, Mrs. R. B. Fairbanks' Bluebeard, the Milky Way Stable's Whiskolo, J. H. Louchheim's Morpluck, Mrs. C. Hainesworth's Blackbirder, J. S. Riley's Color Bearer, Jouett Shouse's Weston; J. C. Flanigan's Chance View, T. C. Worden's Prince Splendor and the Brandon Stable's Tutticurio.

Nellie Flag Gains Backing.

It is virtually conceded that Today will march to the post the favorite tomorrow, despite the fact that Nellie Flag, the only gal in the field, has gained steadily in the opinion of the masses here for the classic. Some contend that there will be a greater number of backers for the filly, but that the Whitney colt will draw more of the important, or "heavy" money. Today was held a 3-1 choice in most of the overnight odds lines, with Nellie Flag at 4 and 5 to 1. Commonwealth, Omaha and Boxthorn were generally placed under 10 to 1.

All indications point to the Derby being run over a fast track despite the heavy rains of last night. This morning the strip was a sea of mud when a group of workmen arrived. They flooded the course to make it even and then pressed the water out with drags. With the aid of a strong wind and a bright sun, the track was improving with each race during the afternoon.

Although the weather prediction was "partly cloudy and much cooler" there wasn't a cloud in the sky at sunset.

D. C. Has Its Favorites.

Backers of Nellie Flag, the filly which will try to join Regret as the only dame to win a Derby, would have been satisfied with an off track. Roman Soldier, Commonwealth and Whiskolo also would have been favored by mud. Today's ability on a dull track is unknown.

Washington, D. C., has what the turf regulars call "a rooting interest" in three horses—Commonwealth, because he is trained by Preston Burch, of the Capital; Today, because he is ridden by Sonny Workman, the District jockey, and Weston, because he is owned by Jouette Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic national committee and now residing in the Capital.

It will be the old racing battle tomorrow of the pace setter, against the stretch runners. The early speed of the race seems to lie among Plat Eye, Nellie Flag and Roman Soldier. All the others, at some time have "eaten the ground" in the final dash for the wire. Today is a sort of an "in-between" horse. It is thought that Workman will try to keep just off the front-runners for most of the trip before making his bid.

Commonwealth, Boxthorn, Omaha, Morpluck and Blackbirder are in the group which must "burn the oil" in the last straightaway if they are to take money places. This fact, when the size of the field is taken into consideration, has served to boost the odds on the slow starters.

Six horses owned by women will compete in the classic won last year by Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Cavalcade.

In the lobbies of the Brown and Kentucky Hotels tonight there were many whispering the warning to "watch Bradley." The colonel is seeking his fifth Derby victory with Boxthorn tomorrow. It was recalled that Jockey Don Meade has been here in Kentucky for more than a month when in other years he rode in Maryland. Boxthorn was rated a fair juvenile last year, but has worked splendidly.

Every owner, trainer and jockey voiced confidence tonight. Every statement ended with "If we have racing luck." Perhaps the most optimistic air was that around the C. V. Whitney barn, where everyone from Scotty, the dog, to Trainer Healey seemed to be reflecting the feeling that tomorrow is Today's day.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 3.

THE night before the sixty-first edition of the Kentucky Derby goes to press, the world is being informed that 70,000 fans will see the race at Churchill Downs. That is a considerable crowd in anybody's calculations and attests to the manner in which the Kentucky affair has gripped the imagination of the Nation's fandom, but I have always contended, in my own feeble way, that a race-track crowd rates one-two with a football crowd in point of innocence as to what it is all about.

POVICH.

By that I mean that a race track crowd, especially a Derby Day throng, is, as a whole, less aware of what is happening during the race than they would have you believe by their babble and shouting. And so is a football crowd, as distinguished from base ball fans, tennis fans and golf fans, who are on top of the play from the moment the first muscle is moved.

Two dollars on the nose of any nag is calculated to arouse the interest of any turf fan, but only the one with the trained eye of the turfman knows exactly what is happening to his two bucks after the barrier goes up and the field becomes a blob of color in the distance. Come rain or mud, and what is taking place on the back stretch is something the lay fan must learn from the chart makers.

You hear 'em talk of horses being pulled, or taken back, or moves being made, but, sans glasses, the lay fan can only draw upon his imagination, so swift is the action. If it's any kind of a hoss race, with the field bunched, 80 per cent of that Derby crowd won't know the winner until he returns to the judges' stand for the floral horse shoe.

AND so it is to football throngs. The niceties of line play, back field strategy and blocking are lost upon football fans in their desire to follow the ball, which, after all, is the medium of the big thrill. The lay fan is no more concerned with the single wing or double wing formation than he is with the unbalanced line or the indirect pass from center. It's not until that ball gets into the open that he gives a hoot or can follow the play.

Fight fans are in the same category. They lay back and wait for that sock. Even if the boxers knew how to feint nowadays, the fans would hardly appreciate it. Blocking and jabbing are lost upon them in their search for the thrill of a knockout. Distressing body punches and the niceties of infighting contribute only to the fans' apathy. Like the football fan, the fightgoer wants only to be in at the kill.

Golf and baseball are the two sports that are really down the fans' alley, with tennis figuring to a slightly lesser degree in the complete appreciation of fandom. Golf fans are closer to the play. Less of a spectacle than football, racing or baseball, golf draws its following chiefly from golfers, and thus the big matches are staged before an appreciative crowd.

The skill of golf's big shots is easily recognized by a golf crowd, which knows from personal experience that a fraction of an inch in the variation of the swing, the choice of the wrong club, or too much or too little turf can have a disastrous effect on a shot. The golf fan not only can marvel to the same degree as the baseball or the football fan, but he understands the whys and wherefores better.

One College Game Slated Here Today

Wilson to Play Shepherd at Griffith Stadium.

Wilson Teachers' baseball game with Shepherd College at Griffith Stadium is the only item on the District's sports card today, aside from Maryland's field day at College Park. The game starts at 3:30 o'clock.

George Washington's nine meets Johns Hopkins, while Catholic University's trackmen meet the Blue Jays in Baltimore. The Colonials are expected to take the ball game, but Johns Hopkins looks to be more than a match for the Cardinals.

Bill Jenkins, Shepherd's star pitcher, will not see action today as he was stricken with appendicitis earlier in the week. The Rams will be working under a terrific handicap with him out of the line-up.

W. & L. Golfer Wins.

Hot Springs, Va., May 3 (AP).—Spence Kerkow, of Washington and Lee, today won the Old Dominion Golf Tournament in the men's division, and Mrs. Norman Holmes, of Bronxville, N. Y., in the women's division.

Maryland Host At Field Day Carnival

1,000 to Compete Today; Play in Four Sports Is Scheduled.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

TRACK, garnished with a sprinkling of baseball, lacrosse and tennis, is the principal dish on an appetizing sports menu offered South Atlantic collegiate fans today.

Nearly 1,000 athletes will participate in the University of Maryland's gigantic field day carnival at College Park. Forty-eight schoolboy teams from Maryland, Virginia and the District will vie for county championship and open honors in the interscholastic meet, while more polished competition, though not keener, will be supplied by the Terrapin varsity and freshmen squads.

Maryland meets Virginia Poly and Washington and Lee in a triangular dual, and the freshmen will toe the mark with Gallaudet College. The Terp runners are expected to win both meets handily.

Baseball Renewal.

Georgetown clashes with the Old Liners in baseball in a game that marks the renewal of their diamond rivalry after a lapse of almost two decades. The Hoyas will go into action in the role of underdogs, but it is one of those battles where anything can happen, and if the Hilarious Hilltoppers are in form, there will be some fireworks.

At 4 o'clock Maryland's lacrossemen meet Syracuse in Byrd Stadium—a match that brings two of the East's outstanding stick combinations together. Maryland also ranks a favorite in this, but there is ample room for an upset.

Tennis Match Slated.

Catholic University's tennis squad completes the bill of fare in a match with the host school starting at 1 o'clock.

Other meets scheduled in the South Atlantic sector that smack of action and excitement include Virginia's duel with Navy at Annapolis, with the Middies favored. North Carolina is expected to vanquish Duke in the North State meet at Chapel Hill. Clemson is favored over South Carolina in their meet at Clinton, while V. M. I. is expected to bow to William and Mary.

Stocks Furnish Lively Show In Smart Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—The stock market snapped smartly into action today in the most assured demonstration of rallying power it has displayed in more than a week.

Industrials and specialties, seconded by power shares, were the mainspring of the push-up, and only the rails failed to exhibit any vigor on the upside. The carriers, retarded by a sharp drop in carloadings, were able, however, to hold their own for the most part.

The ragged rail performance and the absence during most of the session of any active assistance from staples did not prevent the industrial and utility stocks from closing around the best levels of the day. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was .5 of a point higher at 40.1, while the 30 industrial shares used in the calculation advanced .9 of a point to 56.0. Transactions were 933,050 shares.

A court decision restraining the Government from further interfering with the merger of Republic Steel and Corrigan-McKinney, was well received and appeared to help the stocks of other heavy industrials as well as Republic. Some volatile high-priced issues benefited sharply from the lightening of sentiment. Coca Cola, with a lift of 7 points, was one of the best, closing at 206, while McKeesport Tin Plate ended over 5 points higher at 107⅜.

Rain Prospects Depress Grains

Wheat, Corn and Oats All Average Lower at Closing.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 3.—In a nervous see-saw market, grain prices averaged a little lower today with wet weather tending to induce sales of wheat on advances.

Possibilities that even western Kansas would receive moisture tonight had a bearish effect on wheat. Nevertheless strength showr by the silver market and by securities acted at times as a rallying influence relative both to wheat and to other grains.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼ off to ¼ up, compared with yesterday's finish, July 97⅛ to 97¼; corn ⅛ to ⅜ down, July 83½ to 83⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15 cents. Tenders on May contracts were heavier today in all grains than had been looked for, and this gave something of an advantage to the bear side.

Corn displayed more of a downward price trend than wheat did. One reason given was liberal exports of Argentine corn to the United States. Moreover, word was received that first arrivals of Argenline corn at Eastern domestic points were in good condition and of good quality, likely to grade as No. 2. For the most part, oats traders took their cue from corn.

Provisions reflected hog market upturns and a reduction of stocks of lard and meats at Western points the past month.

Every Dollar in Ads Came Back With $16

Scranton, Pa., May 3.—An accurate and complete record covering a period of 40 years shows an average return of $16 in new business for every dollar spent for advertising, by the International Correspondence Schools.

"Coupon advertising is used exclusively, making it possible to check the results of each advertisement," says Paul V. Barrett, advertising director of the schools. "An accurate accounting has been kept of the business resulting from every advertisement placed since 1895, with the result that the I. C. S. records are probably unique in the evidence they offer of the actual dollar and cents value of advertising."

Silver Begins To Shine Again

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—The silver situation shone a little brighter today as prices for the metal reversed their recent sharp downward tile in principal world markets.

A price of 72½ cents an ounce was posted in New York for foreign silver for commercial use. This was an advance of 1¼ cents over Thursday's level, and followed similar improvement in London and in the Montreal futures market.

At the London "fixing," before New York business hours, the price of spot metal was advanced 1 penny to the equivalent of 72.78 cents, and Montreal futures opened 1¼ to 1¾ cents an ounce higher.

Far Eastern silver currencies responded quickly in the foreign exchange market. Hongkong dollars lifted 2.50 cents to 59.50 cents, and Shanghai funds were up .80 of a cent at 41.30 cents. The Mexican peso, which had held steady despite the sharp dip in silver Thursday, was unchanged again today at 27.90 cents.

Most foreign exchange and silver authorities attributed the rally in silver to a previously oversold speculative position following the rapid decline of the last few days.

'Biff' and Aids Spur 5 Teams In Drills

Erskine Analyzes Flaws; 40 Linemen Directed by Stidham.

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Okla., May 3.—The magical name of Jones has worked a miracle in Oklahoma.

Just the fact that Capt. Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones is a great name in football has silenced all critics of University of Oklahoma football, but if the famous coach succeeds in a miracle of performance—guiding the sooners to a Big Six championship—he at least will thank two gentlemen from opposite ends of the United States and who share but little of the spotlight of attention centered on Jones now.

They are burly Tom Stidham, 245-pound line coach from Chicago, and Robert H. (Doc) Erskine, 160-pound backfield coach from the Mississippi delta, who never played the game but knows how to lay a sun-browned hand on a young player's shoulder and sympathetically analyze the flaws in his passing, plunging, punting or blocking.

Directs 40 Linemen.

Stidham, who won his spurs at Haskell Institute under Dick Hanley and later developed Big Ten stars at Northwestern under Hanley, has 40 linemen under his direction.

Erskine is from New Orleans, where he led Loyola to victory in 11 of 18 games during the last two seasons.

In moleskins and bright red baseball caps, the "Biffer" and his assistants this afternoon ran the sooners with military precision after only five days' drill of the three weeks' spring practice.

Five teams of sooners, every man alert and serious, sped through intricate plays, featuring passes—laterals, forwards and laterals off forwards from single and double wingback formations.

Emmitsburg Will Play In Adams County Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., May 3.—With prospects very poor of getting a berth in the Frederick County Baseball League this season, Emmitsburg has joined the Adams County (Pa.) League. Emmitsburg played ball last year in the Pennsylvania circuit.

After playing with the Frederick County towns since the league was organized, Emmitsburg last year withdrew from the Frederick County League because its field was being improved by the CWA and unfit to play on. Baseball fans this season favored a return to the Frederick County loop, but there was no definite opening.

Ross in New York To Start Training

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—The sock market bounded upward today as Barney Ross, former lightweight champion by abdication, arrived to start training for his third welterweight title joust with Jimmy McLarnin, and Bill Carey, former head of Madison Square Garden, formally took over the presidency of the new Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

At the same time it was reported in most reliable quarters that the board of directors of the Garden had decided in secret meeting to give up boxing and would rent out the arena Tex Rickard built on that sport to the highest bidder, probably Carey, this fall.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

It's Derby day in Kentucky and on the Columbia network. On WJSV at 6 p. m. you'll hear a half-hour of scenic description, sounds of hoof beats, with Bob Trout, Westbrook Van Voorhees and Thomas Bryan George doing the heavies.

Bob Trout was the presidential announcer for WJSV when he was here, but this is the first "horsey" event to which he's been assigned.

Van Voorhees has been heard as narrator of the "March of Time" programs, and it was he who handled the Hauptmann trial broadcasts. George is Columbia's turf expert and will be responsible for the description of the actual race at Churchill Downs.

Best musical bets:

WJSV's "Tour of the World," played by the Navy Band. This is an all-march program, representative of music of various countries. At 8 p. m.

The grocer's heart was touched—he bought new dresses and small white shoes for the singers, drove them and their father to New York and the NBC audition room. Showers of offers followed. Because of school ruling, they will be heard today from Schenectady, as a New York trip would interrupt classes.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

THE widespread demand for the establishment of trained non-political permanent personnel throughout the Government and early elimination of the spoils system of appointments will feature discussions of the general council meeting of the National League of Women Voters here Tuesday through Thursday.

BAKER.

League representatives from 38 States, led by Miss Marguerite M. Wells, of Minneapolis, will attend.

Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Arthur H Vandenburg, of Michigan, will be the principal speakers at a dinner Wednesday. Both are sponsors of bills now pending in Congress to extend the merit system of appointments. They will discuss "Can the Parties Live Without Patronage?"

League delegates will hear more of the political patronage question, as it affects municipal, county, State and Federal governments, in addresses by Prof Harold Lasswell, University of Chicago; and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House.

Members of the league plan to visit the Civil Service Commission Thursday. The league's special campaign in behalf of public service as a career, of which Mrs. George Gellhorn, of St. Louis, is chairman, will present a plan for league activities.

William H. Payne, secretary to Representative Will Rogers, and president of the Oklahoma State Society, reminds all Oklahomans in Government service to attend the society's dance and reception tonight at the National Press Club.

Independence Celebration.

Government employes from Rhode Island are particularly invited to attend the Rhode Island State Society's gala celebration of the State's Independence Day tonight at the Washington Hotel. Mrs. D. J. Heffernan, president, has named the following Federal people to take prominent parts in the program:

Reception—Arthur Donnelly, Patent Office; William J. Crane, Justice; John Quinn, Government Printing Office; Thomas Carroll, NRA; Capt. John H. Doherty, War; Commander Joseph Simon, Navy. Tickets—Miss Rita Gaucher, Federal Housing Administration; Miss Victoria Rossi, PWA, and Leon H. Markey, NRA. Cards—Mrs. Ada Riley (F), Navy, and Mrs. Irene Le Dane, Justice. Publicity—William J. Crane, Justice, and George B. Tormey (C), PWA.

Dr. Hugh S. Cummings, Surgeon General, Public Health Service, was among the alumni recently elected to membership in Sigma XI at the University of Virginia.

Numerous changes are expected to take place in the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation in the next ten days. Some divisions are likely to be discontinued while others will be expanded. This may mean that many members of the FSRC will be lost in the shuffle.

Arrangements have been made by the Personnel Office to maintain a transfer list, composed of names of all employes scheduled for release because of diminishing work in any particular section or division. In the event of vacancies in other divisions, these individuals will be extended preference to the extent of being sent for the first interview.

Two employes of the Accounting Division left FSRC this week. J. T. Barnes, formerly of Transportation Audit Section, is now with Internal Revenue, going to the New York office for a training period of 6$ days before being assigned to field work. George Schindler, formerly of Voucher Approval Section is now with Treasury.

Meanwhile employes are planning to organize an athletic association which will foster a baseball team, tennis, golf, bicycling and other sports.

Ewing Jones, Editorial Division, Soil Erosion Service, is on a field trip through the South and West. He will be absent from Washington several weeks.

Blossom time of verdant trees
Cheering sunshine, balmy breeze
Can o' worms and fishin' pole

Outdoor sports now reach their stride
Graduates on every side
Nothing can beat May so rare—
Would we had some leave to spare!

Both papers will be illustrated with slides.

The May meeting of the National Association of Retired Federal Employes will be held at 2 p. m. today in Room 43, Natural History Building, National Museum, according to John M. Kline, (P) president.

Dr. Hitchcock Is Author.

Dr. A. S. Hitchcock (F), principal botanist, Division of Exploration and Introduction, Bureau of Plant Industry, is the author of a book just published by Agriculture, "A Manual of the Grasses of the United States." It runs to 1,040 pages and contains 1,696 text figures. One reviewer writes as follows of Dr. Hitchcock's work:

"This is a major contribution to our knowledge of the grasses of North America, marks the culmination of more than 30 years of intensive work on the part of the author, and will be found to be of great value not only to botanists in diverse fields, but to a great number of individuals interested in various phases of agriculture, forestry, conservation, soil erosion, irrigation and other fields."
